Only the naïve have ever believed that all diplomats and journalists from Communist countries sent to the West were just what they seemed. Although many stories are filed, and routine diplomatic tasks undertaken, too many defectors have revealed too much for it to be a secret that not all Soviet chauffeurs are outranked by their Ambassadors.

Currently in London there are several intriguing manifestations of this phenomenon. For example, though Britain does not recognize North Vietnam, there have been for some five months a strange pair of journalists from Hanoi in London.

Mr Cu Dinh Ba and Mr Nguyen van Sao live in Hampstead, and officially represent the political journal Quoc Weekly. They have called twice at the Foreign Office—once to present their credentials, and once to pay their respects to the News Department. At this second meeting they were invited to attend the non-confidential daily news conference at 12.30 a.m., and were told that if confidential matters were discussed at other daily briefings, they could request a supplementary briefing. This was an unusually cordial gesture, since though Western correspondents in Communist countries are frequently granted ministerial interviews, they seldom get these invaluable daily briefings.

However, neither Mr Ba nor Mr Sao have been seen again at the FO. They have been seen at the bar of the House of Lords: they have been seen by various diplomatic correspondents: they have been noted entering the Chinese Legation. But not on the normal round of news-gathering.

It may be that their employers at the Quoc Weekly are mean: urgent press cables to Hanoi cost 8s rod a word, and ordinary lettermail can take up to two weeks to reach Hanoi. So that any story which the correspondents sent would be either crippling expensive, or thoroughly out-dated.

However, it could equally be argued that their function is rather more diplomatic than journalistic. They are said to have been of great help to Harold Davies MP, and writers James Cameron and Graham Greene, in arranging visas to visit North Vietnam. If they do have some consular authority, it could easily exceed that of Britain's Consul-General in Hanoi, Mr Myles Ponsonby, who is accredited to the Tourist Board of the Hanoi Municipal Council, and finds it difficult, often impossible, to move outside the city.

Late-night drinking

Unlike those with North Vietnam, relations with the Czechs and Bulgars are perfectly normal. Nevertheless, recent activities at those Embassies have aroused some comment. Though at one time noted for the frequency and scale of their hospitality, neither Embassy had in recent years thrown many parties for the British Press: then the Czechs held two parties in quick succession last month, and much the same group of guests were invited to a Bulgarian party last week. At these parties it became clear that if the British Press had not been much cultivated of late, the foreign Press corps in London had. From them were heard stories of late-night drinking sessions after previous parties, notably between Czechs and West German journalists.

There are no official relations between Czechoslovakia and West Germany: officials of the two Embassies are forbidden to attend each other's formal parties. But the Czechs appear to have been consistently eager to meet West Germans less formally: one West German official claims to have been promised the presence of "lots of Viennese au pair girls" at a private Czech party, and a Bonn journalist was taken out night-clubbing after a Czech reception.

In the good old days when Communist champagne and caviar came straight off the Aeroflot or CSA Ilyushin and on to the side-tables at the London Embassies, Iron Curtain Press attachés held regular meetings to exchange notes—who among Britain's journalists was drunk, indiscreet, or grew sympathetic as the evening wore on. Many a journalist subsequently received an invitation to write articles for East bloc papers, or to "advise" Communist correspondents. The ultimate benevolence was a free trip to Prague or Moscow.

Searching for an explanation of this sudden revival of interest, diplomatic correspondents conclude that the Czechs are seeking to improve relations with the West in a hurry: particularly, to create their own friendships as opposed to general pro-Communist or pro-Soviet relationships. As for the Bulgars it might be thought that they have seen with envious eyes the profitable results of neighbouring Rumania's new-found independence. Since British support usually softens the way to American generosity, why not invest a few measures of slivovitz in the capitalist press?

Why Quoodle keeps mum

The conduct of Mr Iain Macleod over the Rhodesia crisis has aroused much comment on all wings of the Conservative Party. His former partisans on the left have been disturbed by what has seemed to be a transformation in Mr. Macleod's attitude towards the liberation of black Africa, and his old enemies on the right have been puzzled by his apparent overtures to their wing.

Not that Mr Macleod has been overtly or consistently pro-Smith: it is just that in the discussion within the Opposition he has taken pains not to commit himself irrevocably against the pro-Rhodesians, while outside—at London University, for example—still clinging to his more expected pro-African line.

Both political wings have jumped to substantially the same conclusion: that Mr Macleod anticipates at some future date a further contest for the leadership of his party, and does not again wish to be stopped dead in his tracks by the concerted opposition of the right. One member of the Monday Club, the meeting-place of the right, calls Mr Macleod's conduct "a cynical bid for power": less prejudiced Conservatives think that Mr Macleod has merely decided that national unity is impossible on this thorny issue, and in the circumstances it is tactically foolish of the Tories to try to go gently with Mr Wilson.

Undoubtedly there is reason to think Mr Macleod is right in suspecting that Mr Heath may not necessarily stay leader for years ahead. There is widespread criticism that Mr Heath, having been elected as Mr Wilson's match, is in fact merely his butt.

Tory morale is not high: the debate on the BP tanker taking oil to Rhodesia only took place because there were not enough Conservatives in the House to carry on the earlier business. Large numbers of them had departed for the Carlton Club – not the action of enthusiastic or "abrasive" critics of the Government. The Young Conservatives are in revolt against all save Macleod and Enoch Powell of the party leadership. Mr Du Cann, they say, has not so far been a success as Chairman.

In the circumstances, particularly as Mr Maudling has once again elected to play it cool – this time by disappearing into the fastnesses of the City – Mr Macleod is probably justified in his reading of the situation. If the Opposition continues to fare badly in the House, or should go down to electoral defeat in the Spring, Mr Heath's position may be totally eroded. The present leader certainly lacks either the personal charisma or the cutting wit of Mr Macleod, and both might be necessary to make real dents into Mr Wilson.

In the two previous contests for the Tory leadership, Mr Macleod was a weak runner not only because he was identified with the left-wing, but also because he had failed to make a mark for competence. As Leader of the House and Chairman of the Party, his rule coincided with the disastrous Tory slide marked by the Orpington by-election.

After Sir Alec was elected, Mr Macleod then published in the Spectator his famous "magic circle" account of the contest which managed to convey both that he had attempted Machiavellian methods incompetently, and he thought it unfair that someone else should do so with greater success. Undeniably, his health had long been bad, but it is now said that his health is mending fast, and that his appetite for battle – against Socialism and against the weaknesses in his own party – is high.

On the issues which can shake the Government, he is strong: prepared to put Rhodesia firmly into politics, and a proven success in the Steel argument: his association with Mr Judge, of Dorman Longs, at the Spectator, and his triumphant commitment of the party to re-nationalization have won him friends on the business wing. He has also gone further in criticism of the Trades Unions than the present leader. Indeed, old political acquaintances have taken to reminiscing of Mr Macleod's days in the Bow Group and recalling with surprise that in those times most of the Bow Group policies were noted for their commitment to individual enterprise and resource, rather than to state planning and welfare.

At any rate, Mr Macleod appears to be honing his sword against some future battle: and having been seen at it, has seen his colleagues thinking first, that he may well be right in worrying over Mr Heath's abilities, and second, that maybe the Party could do worse than adopt Quoodle. Mr Wilson is said to take it so seriously he has organized a complete dossier of all Mr Macleod's sayings – and what others, including all shades of Rhodesian opinion – have said of Mr Macleod. Presumably not the flattering things.

Women first off the shelf

Mary Stewart and Muriel Spark are slipping off the best-seller lists: Violette Leduc, Edna O'Brien and Grace Metalious have already gone. Stern, masculine books like A J P Taylor's History of Britain, 1914-1945 and The Penkovsky Papers are currently up at the top. Which all goes to show that authors have good cause to grieve that they derive no income, save for the sale of a few copies, from the Public Libraries. For at the libraries, Mr Taylor is nowhere, and the women hold total sway.

The latest figures from London's biggest boroughs of their "waiting lists" for books put Miss Stewart, Miss O'Brien and the late Grace Metalious firmly at the top, with the Misses Spark, Drabble and Leduc running strongly behind. Also well up the

in charge of the light brigade

“Designing the Christmas Lights is not a matter of genius or great creative ideas. You have to be more practical than that—know how to hang things, how to keep the damned lights up there and most of all, it’s essential to remember that they’re there to give people pleasure, not to win designer awards.”

Beverley Pick puffs on his cigar and adds “what’s the point if whole families come all the way to London from Birmingham and then are disappointed because they don’t understand what they’re looking at?” His designs for the lights in Regent Street and Oxford Street more than meet the requirements.

He believes in functional design. His Sanderson Building interior and the BOAC Terminal at Victoria illustrate that. He says that unless a design serves its initial function it is useless. “I don’t care if it’s a chair, a tea cup or a dress, it has to be functional!”

“Take some of the new way-out furniture designs”, he says. “Who wants a chair that’s fabulous to look at and uncomfortable to sit in?” He points to his own Eames chairs “these are the best chair designs so far. They’re beautiful and they’re functional. You want to sit in one, not simply stare at it.”

“Although it might be considered corny, I get a big kick out of standing in a crowd in Regent Street and watching people’s eyes light up.” He talks about the designs he’s seen on the continent. He shrugs “maybe the weird, designy shapes you see over there are fine for continentals, but they would not suit the British who have a feeling and love for the traditional Christmas.”

He’s a very busy man, this Beverley Pick. Busy designing new Christmas Lights every January “it takes about 6 months from the drawing board to the manufacturing stage.” He does lots of exhibition work, including work on the interior of the British Pavilion for the Montreal World’s Fair in 1967. He did the British Pavilion for the Seattle Fair and before that, a pavilion for the one in Brussels. In between, he manages to keep busy as Managing Director of his international company “and I do the lights for Glasgow which they reckon to be the most lit-up city in the world!”

He is a designer who combines creative ability with a business sense. “It helps if you can sell your own work” he smiles and adds “most creative people have difficulty there.” Beverley Pick doesn’t seem to have that problem.

He is a designer who never loses sight of his function: to please people. He says most success is based on that simple premise. And that probably explains the success of vodka. Cossack Vodka. People drink Cossack Vodka because it has a good, clean taste. Cossack Vodka because it mixes well with everything. Cossack Vodka because it stands on its own merits and gives simple drinking pleasure.

Beverley Pick says function is as important as form. The success of his designs proves that. So does Cossack Vodka.

field are Iris Murdoch, Georgette Heyer and Nell Dunn. In fact, the only serious male contenders for the Library championship are Gavin Maxwell, whose House of Elrig comes as high as joint third in Wandsworth, and Brian Glanville, who scores heavily in Camden.

The lists cast an intriguing light on the literary tastes of the various districts. For though in Lambeth, Westminster, Wandsworth, Sutton, Haringey, Camden and Southwark the lists are all dominated by ladies, the leaders vary. In Haringey, Grace Metalious' Peyton Place and Edna O'Brien's August Is a Wicked Month leave the rest standing: in Wandsworth and Sutton, conceivably more genteel, the runaway winner is Mary Stewart with Airs Above The Ground. In increasingly smart Camden, with its showpiece library at Swiss Cottage, Miss O'Brien is chased home by La Batarde, the controversial autobiography from Violette Leduc. In Southwark, a walkover for Peyton Place: in Westminster, Grace Metalious doesn't even make the list, which Edna O'Brien has sewn up in any case

New move in the battle of books

Since independence was granted to India and Pakistan in 1947 there has been a running battle between Delhi, Karachi and Whitehall over the future of the old India Office Library. Probably the finest Oriental library in the West, if not the world, there are at least a quarter of a million books and 25,000 manuscripts at present lodged at the Commonwealth Relations Office.

The British Government has always been loath to part with the library, and the law officers of the Crown have in the past maintained that India and Pakistan have no claims on it. Nevertheless, the question has now been referred to a judicial tribunal.

Whatever the result of this inquiry, the Government cannot keep the library where it is: the CRO is due to come down as part of the Whitehall rebuilding scheme. Accordingly, they have, without making any excessive noise about it, set work in hand to move it to Orbit House, a large new block in the Blackfriars Road. The whole library is scheduled to go there next March: something like 240 van loads of books and papers, into specially designed accommodation built at a cost of £200,000. From an Indian or Pakistani view, it does sound really rather permanent.

Your name in magnetic ink

It used to be that when one needed a new cheque book, one simply asked and was given. If it was lost, there was no indication to a potential swindler of the right name to be forged. Came the computer, and suddenly banks went over not only to printing the serial numbers in magnetic ink, but in many cases to stamping the customer's name in the signature space.

Now one bank at least, the Midland, is taking the process a stage further. They are just starting a three-year programme to have the names printed in magnetic ink as well. Since this has to be done by printers rather than by a local clerk, they plan that every branch should in future hold in stock three ready-printed cheque books for each customer. Undoubtedly the system will show great savings, but it will also entail the average branch holding in stock some 7,000 cheque books. If you find your local branch over-run by men with saws and hammers, do not strike them with your handbag or umbrella, they may be putting in the new cupboards necessary to accommodate your cheque book.

That 40 letter obsession

Although George Bernard Shaw died just over 15 years ago, the Public Trustee still has problems with his idiosyncratic will. The steady flow of royalties from My Fair Lady and the current rash of Shaw revivals are easily dealt with – they go to the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, the National Gallery of Ireland, and to the British Museum. But Shaw also provided for an inquiry to be held into the uses and the shortcomings of the 26-letter alphabet as against one with 40 letters – which he thought would save time.

An edition of Androcles and the Lion was published some time ago in the longer alphabet, but for the past year the full inquiry has been going on. Organized by Mr. Peter MacCarthy, head of the phonetics department at Leeds University, the inquiry hopes to produce a report sometime in the New Year. When it does, the Public Trustee will probably publish its findings in a pamphlet, the funds for which are held in a separate account from that of the main beneficiaries.

Once published, that will be the end of that—unless the inquiry's findings are so firmly in favour of the revised alphabet that some other wealthy sponsor can be found to take up Shaw's great obsession.

They were the most

At the close of the year, the biggest hits in the arts and entertainment for 1965 make strange reading. Biggest TV audience was for the Prime Minister on Rhodesia's UDI (12¼ million homes). Most successful movie was Walt Disney's Mary Poppins: most popular West End show Robert and Elizabeth, which opened in October, 1964. Biggest selling new book was Ian Fleming's The Man With the Golden Gun, now pushing 125,000 in hardback: Fleming's On Her Majesty's Secret Service was the year's top paperback, going well over 2 million. Most successful pop single was Ken Dodd's Tears, and the LP winner was the Beatles' Help—Dodd sold a million 45's, the Beatles half-a-million long-players.

Trooping in to the hat

With six months to go before the Queen's official birthday, hundreds of applications have already been received at Brigade of Guards HQ in Whitehall for tickets to watch the ceremony of Trooping the Colour, due to take place on June 11, 1966. First applications came in last December. Tickets cost 30s each, and very shortly there will be more than enough applications to be thrown into a hat and drawn to establish the lucky ones.

London lights for sale

There is a sporting chance that by Christmas Eve, the decorations in Oxford and Regent Streets will already be booked to grace the main street of some other city next year. Like pantomime sets and costumes, civic decorations never die—they merely move further and further out into the provinces.

Some of those from Christmas, 1964, for example, are now with Billy Smart's Circus. Others are at seaside resorts gracing small displays up and down the country. Designed by Mr Beverley Pick, the London decorations, like those of Glasgow, Birmingham and Rotherham, are built by his company. Once up, they are both doing their job, and on display to potential future users.

There is, of course, nothing to stop a private individual making a bid for any item. From any set, there are normally one or two items that cannot be taken by the civic purchasers—Oxford and Regent Streets being longer and wider than most out-of-town shopping centres. Mark you, even one pendant star would take up most of the living room—and could be embarrassing come Twelfth Night.

Dining out without steaks

London's newest club has just opened in Great Russell Street, the Annapurna. No gambling, no drinks, no steaks—in fact, an exclusively vegetarian dining club. It is owned by Ramsh Patel, an Indian restaurateur and hotelier who already has a public vegetarian restaurant, hotel and retail shop nearby.

Mr Patel, who came here from India 12 years ago, originally started his Sharuna Hotel for other Indians. Now its clientele is as much made up of English faddists: the new club is designed to appeal to those who not only take their vegetarianism seriously, but cannot afford the prices of most specialist restaurants. It offers lunches and dinners for five shillings—and for that one takes as much as one can eat. Membership is a guinea a year, and in the spring the club will begin staging art exhibitions and occasional recitals.

The ones that got away

The Goya portrait of the Duke of Wellington, its adventures over, will be back on show at the National Gallery in the New Year. Although the best publicized, it is not the only item to have been feloniously removed from the London galleries and museums: and there are still plenty of exhibits which are not likely

Having just completed filming Paris in August in Paris in November, Susan Hampshire is off again to Hollywood on Boxing Day. Two weeks later, back here for a radio play, then to the Peggy Ashcroft Theatre, Croydon, to do a short season of She Stoops to Conquer. Then Paris once more, to make another film with French director Pierre Granier-Deferre. The film, as yet untitled, she says: "I would wait the rest of my life to do. The book has been bought especially for me—it's a fantastic part, unbelievably challenging" to be back on show ever again.

Since 1942, the following items have disappeared without warning from the national collections:

British Museum – 12 Assyrian sculptures worth £480; a Roman relief of Eros worth £100; six Greek vases valued at £777; and an eye from a lion's head worth £40.

Science Museum – a £50 Leica camera, three model locomotives worth £375, and some gold chemical apparatus, £75.

The Victoria and Albert – two jewelled swords worth £1,250, two drawings by Daumier, £1,500, and an Indian walking stick, £80.

National Maritime Museum – a Nelson chelengk (no, don't ask), worth £10,000 (pretty steep for a chelengk, I'd say), and the Vernon gold box, £1,000.

National Portrait Gallery – a £100 portrait of John Russell

Apsley House (this month) – priceless Greater George garter

jewel, the jewel of the Golden Fleece, and the jewelled baton of a field marshal in the Imperial Russian Army.

Finally, from the War Museum, someone removed an early model Sten gun, priced at £25. Not necessarily a connoisseur's theft, that one.

Adam stays in Adelphi

One of the frequent battles fought over London's buildings by preservers and developers has just ended in an entirely unexpected victory for the preservers. The fight has been over three Adam houses in the Adelphi, originally the subject of a preservation order, but condemned to make way for offices after a Ministry of Housing Inquiry in 1962.

The saviour has been the new restrictions on office-building:

although the houses, in themselves attractive, had been home to Sir James Barrie, Thomas Hood, John Galsworthy, Kingsley Martin and Malcolm Muggeridge in their time, it was George Brown who saved them, albeit in ignorance of their particular case.

When it seemed that they could be taken down and replaced by offices, they were bought (in 1963) by London, City & Westcliff Properties Ltd for £306,000. The new restriction introduced by the incoming Labour Government stopped their original plans, however. The company has now been granted a new development permit by the Board of Trade – but this time, the houses will remain, and will be converted into four flats, two large maisonettes, and offices.

And now the jazz drain

Two of Britain's leading Jazz saxophonists, Tony Coe and Joe Temperley, have joined the steady exodus from this country to the United States. Coe, tenor sax, clarinet and flute, is to join Count Basie – an offer which would presumably seduce any jazzman, European or American. Temperley, baritone and tenor sax, has gone over with his family to try his luck. Both were with the Humphrey Lyttelton band in London.

The drain has been going on a long time – Ray Noble, the band-leader who wrote "Cherokee", left pre-war, and in the forties George Shearing and Marion McPartland left. During the fifties, nearly every British pianist of note made for the States as soon as he had established a reputation: Ronnie Ball, Ralph Sharon, Victor Feldman (also a drummer, vibraphonist and arranger), and Derek Smith.

In the sixties, pianists Dill Jones and Eddie Thompson have so far gone. Of these emigrés, the most successful have probably been Shearing, with his famous quintet, Sharon, for eight years pianist-arranger with Tony Bennett, and Feldman, who has played with Woody Herman and Cannonball Adderley. But all the British musicians have found work and respect in the States – both things hard to come by for jazz musicians in this country.

When Eddie Thompson left he said: "I feel I've come to a dead end over here. The trouble with this country is that too many good musicians are chasing too few jobs." Dill Jones confirmed this view: "I believe our jazz scene has so much talent – but it doesn't get a chance." Certainly for pianists, there are far more opportunities in America: playing in pubs is no substitute for the US night-club circuit.

Opera pays off for two

Having just closed three successful exhibitions of theatrical designs and sketches – in Finchley, Coventry and at the Arts Theatre – Peter Wright and David Hepburn are planning a further show next spring. Hepburn, a dancer, and Wright, whose full-time career is running a fish-and-chip shop, began these exhibitions last year. So far, each has been more successful than the last.

Showing original sketches and finished designs for both sets and costumes, the exhibitions provide both original pictures at reasonable prices, and a secondary income for the artists. That which has just closed at Hepburn and Wright's Finchley house, offered among other collections the Annals' sketches for Royal Hunt of the Sun, some costume designs for Fonteyn and Nureyev by Philip Prowse, and Carl Toms' Swan Lake designs.

Next spring's show, possibly at a London gallery, otherwise at their house again, will be devoted to opera sets and costumes. They are, according to Peter Wright, of their very nature more lavish and give greater licence to the designer. Appealing not only to the general art-buying public but also to the stage-struck, the future is rosy: the total value, in amounts from £5 to £100, of the sales at this winter's exhibition in their home was about £5,000.

For the one Santa forgot . . .

Should you commit one of those seasonal gaffes which sour relationships for months after, and omit to get a present before Christmas Day, it may be possible to redeem yourself on Boxing Day: since Christmas this year falls on Saturday, Petticoat Lane will be open for business on the Sunday. According to the chairman of the Stepney Street Traders' Association, Mr Leonard Reinstein: "The Lane only misses a Sunday if it actually is Christmas Day."

SOME UNCLES ARE BETTER THAN OTHERS

But there is always work for them at nine to fifteen guineas a time, says Llew Gardner

I have been investigating the world of UNCLE. A curious place. Shadowy. Few, outside an exclusive circle, know of its existence. Its inhabitants move discreetly around fashionable London. Butlers know them by sight and treat them with respect. When they foray into the country to visit some stately pile the footman is on hand to carry their luggage. It is usually very heavy. They carry a lot of equipment. After all, they need to be prepared for almost anything.

UNCLE? No, I haven't forgotten the punctuation. The world to which I refer is the outermost fringe of the entertainment industry: the small band whose speciality is performing at private children's parties. None make fortunes. Few ever get their names in the newspapers. But neither do they starve. The showbiz scene may rock from crises to new fashion but there is always work for them.

This is their busiest season. But most of them are hard at it all the year round. London, it seems, is a swinging place for children's parties. Most uncles work every day. To be sure of getting the one you want you may have to book a year ahead.

Their fees vary from nine to 15 guineas. What they offer also varies. Some will run the entire party: organize games, put on a show and make sure that during tea a minimum of jelly is thrown on the ceiling. Others leave the organization to others and act as entertainers pure and simple.

Not all like the term uncle. "It makes me sound like a red-nosed comic," says Mr Norman Myers, who has been organizing parties at 14 guineas a time for the past 14 years.

Mr Myers certainly does not look like a red-nosed comic. In fact he looks rather like a successful solicitor, which is what he intended to be. He didn't like office life. He is adamant that the children should call him Mr Myers.

He says: "There are lots of uncles but there are not many who will take complete charge." And then again: "One doesn't want to sound snobbish but a lot of parents say to me: 'We like having you, Mr Myers, because when the party is over you are the kind of person with whom we can sit down and have a drink and a talk.'"

Mr Myers says that most of his clients are "Society . . . titled people . . . 90 per cent. live in SW 1-3-5 and 7 . . . I know every second child in Chester Square."

Mr Piet Tovenaar, born Frederick Bliss but happy to be called plain Uncle Piet, more or less agrees: "Royalty . . . well I shall not mention royalty. Shall we say distinguished persons." Ernest and April Castro don't share Mr Tovenaar's inhibitions. Their advertisements include the words: "Under Royal Patronage." Mr Castro told me that he and his wife had entertained most of the royal children.

Unlike the Castros or Mr Tovenaar, whose acts include conjuring and ventriloquism, Mr Myers concentrates on the organizing of party games and the giving of a film show. If a conjuror or another entertainer is specially asked for he will supply them. Not all, it seems, are as expert entertainers as those mentioned; "I wouldn't give you tuppence for some of them," says Mr Myers. Mr Castro agrees that some uncles are better than others.

Mr Myers has invented quite a few original party games but admits that nothing he has been able to dream up has come near competing in popularity with the old-fashioned and riotous "musical bumps."

"Really," he says, "all children want to do is fight. I guarantee no fights."

Mr Tovenaar put it this way: "One woman once told me: 'It's worth paying your fee just to save the damage to the furniture.'"

Most of the uncles are either very lucky or very tactful. Children seem remarkably well behaved in their company. Mr Myers looked quite shocked at the suggestion that a child at one of his parties could be really ill-behaved. Looking back over his 15 years' experience, Mr Tovenaar found himself at a loss to recall a really naughty child. But he warned: "If you don't like children they will sense it. They are like animals." One of his problems is not badly behaved children but "mothers chatting at the back of the room."

Tommy Keele, who at 72 is probably the oldest uncle in the business, says he has had his share of awkward customers. He is quite prepared to be tough with them. "You mustn't let them get the upper hand," he told me. He once invited a troublesome boy on to the stage and invited him to carry on with the entertainment:

"Of course he couldn't and I didn't have any more trouble."

Mr Keele started life as a jockey and later became a circus rider. In the twenties he did a song and dance act in music hall. He is the first to admit that if he hadn't found his way into the world of private parties he probably wouldn't be working today.

"Some of the profession used to look down on us as the dregs. But not now."

Mr Tovenaar says: "Ours is one of the few branches of the entertainment world where you can rely on regular work. Of course there is big money in television but just as you get used to living at a certain level then — crash. You never know how long it is going to last. There will always be children. And I don't have to worry about being polite to managers and agents."

It is, of course, necessary to be polite to parents. But as Mr Castro says: "They are always very good to you. After all they have invited you to come along. It's not like a visit from the doctor or the solicitor."

The Castros attribute their success with children to "a curious Pied Piper quality." Mr Tovenaar also says he likes and gets on well with children. Curiously neither he nor the Castros have children of their own. Mr Myers has two and helps organize their parties.

I asked Mr Keele if he liked children. "Do you know, I don't really know," he said.

Then he added: "I love little girls but little boys hurt me. They remind me too much of my son who was killed."

The goldfish who came in from the cold.

(A cryptically bitter encounter with Campari)

Christmas Eve.

She was big and she was beautiful. He had amber eyes. "Due Campari con seltz." In Italian with a grammar school accent.

"You remembered!" The girl clapped her hands. A year ago, their first meeting at the Marquis, there had been a goldfish in a bowl on their table.

He gave her an envelope. "Your bonus. Did you get the new stuff?" He glanced at his watch. 11.50. He had to hand the stuff over at midnight.

She evaded. "I bought you a present, too." He unwrapped it, and put the bottle of Campari beside the goldfish.

"Thank you. The stuff?"

Fiori brought their drinks and pressed the syphon trigger. The soda hurled into the Campari, frothing pink around the ice.

She laughed with strain as he looked through her. "The formula you want is..." She reeled it all off. "It's a miracle apparently. It really works. But I have to confess..."

He signalled for two more Camparis. His eyes gleamed gemlike. "Tell me you're finished? You can't go on?"

She muttered. "Industrial spying's so dirty..."

"I suppose Leslie told you that." His eyes flashed green. They drank in silence.

Then he said: "Oh, yes, I know about Leslie. Not a pleasant story, is it?" She began to cry into her Campari. "Thank you for the formula. That was all we wanted from you." He uncorked the bottle of Campari she had given him. 11.55. Five minutes to Christmas.

"But you can't remember all—what are you doing?" He poured the Campari into the goldfish bowl.

"I don't have to remember it all. The goldfish, my dear little ex-spy, is a fake. The smallest tape recorder in the world. Scusi, è meglio più tardi." He waved Fiori away.

Tears dried on her white cheeks. He drained his glass. Smiled forgivingly.

"Cigarette?"

He held his lighter under her nose, spraying the cyanide as he lit her cigarette. She drew deeply on the cigarette, then collapsed.

He stubbed out her cigarette and pocketed the goldfish. Midnight. He bent over her. "Merry Christmas," he whispered, and left—as if to call a doctor.

Her fingers twitched, knocking over her Campari. It dripped redly on the floor. Around her, everyone was drinking to Christmas Day.

Campari is pink and cryptically bitter and marvellous. Made from strange herbs macerated in grape spirit. Mix Campari with ice and soda. If you're feeling tough, swop the soda for gin. Buon Natale.

Domandate Campari ovunque andate.

POP-EYE

This happened in Paris last week. This, they say, is going to happen in London over Christmas. You may say it is ridiculous but it is what the girls are doing

However much trouble a girl takes over her clothes, she depends and relies on her eyes for complete success. Now women are spending more and more time, money and trouble over these personal jewels. Eye fever has reached its climax this Christmas and girls in London, Paris and New York are working ferociously at making their eyes the most exciting eyes at a party. The results are astonishing. John Kennedy of London's Ad Lib Club was amazed to see eyes in the smoky gloom growing gradually larger and brighter, like so many coloured lights on a Christmas tree.

"It's incredible what these girls manage to paint round their eyes, and stick on their lashes," he said. "I admire their painstaking imagination."

Today the idea is so popular that in Elizabeth Arden's London branch, a pretty girl called Panchita is specializing in eyes only, and at this time of year she is so overworked she hasn't even time to go to bed with 'flu.

Sarah White, ex-model and designer, married to impresario Michael White, is expecting a baby in January. She rushed in to see Panchita last week before going to a party.

"That little black dress is all very well," she explained, "but a girl likes to add a little excitement. At the moment I use my eye make-up to prevent people looking at my figure. A clever trick!"

Francesca Annis is playing in Passion Flower Hotel and has not much time for parties, yet she finds this kind of eye make-up such fun, that she either puts it on herself at home during the day, or goes round to Panchita.

"For two guineas you can spend a fascinating hour just creating a new eye," she says. Like many other eye fanatics, Francesca normally wears little or no ordinary make-up.

In Paris the eye cult is taken very seriously and even the men turn up to parties with odd eyes. Playboy Gunther Sachs was one of the first to dare. "It is simply very amusing," he says. "Why shouldn't men create eyes for themselves? It is no more ridiculous than fancy dress or masked balls."

But I must report that London men have not yet taken the plunge.

Now take your seats for a trip to the Moon, boys and girls

by Romany Bain

Children are big business. Last year the turnstiles clicked 240,856 times in 12 days at the Schoolboys' and Girls' Exhibition. The organizers have been quick to realize that amusement and fantasy can be heavily laced with fact, and all juveniles are potentially useful to society as embryo lawyers, Clores, hospital matrons, merchant seamen and police sergeants. It's just a case of getting them inside.

The mixture, as in previous years, offers such excitements as a flight to the moon in an 82-seater Lunar Space Ship, designed with the full co-operation of the Vice-President of the British Interplanetary Society, the Douglas Missile & Space Div, California, and top BBC Visual Effects man

Bernard Wilkie. This is cheek by jowl with a Careers Section which warrants 17 separate stands, and gives expert information.

The Exhibition was the brainchild of a Mr Cecil S Schofield and was first staged at Christmas, 1925, in the Royal Horticultural Hall. Mr Schofield patriotically changed its name to "The Schoolboys Own Exhibition for Youth and Empire" in 1928, but this didn't work the financial oracle, and the Daily Mail took it over the following year and moved it to Olympia. Children were not so rich or so demonstration-minded as they are now, for in 1933 the sponsors sold it back to Mr Schofield, and his son Ernest carried on until 1962. Then it reverted to the Mail once more, and they tactfully retitled it, bringing Schoolgirls into their orbit as well.

They are very coy indeed about the amount of money they make. They charge a 3s entrance fee, having had a nasty uproar in 1962, when they were committed to charging for a ride on the model railway. Tots were up in arms and, since then, everything inside is free. "We wish we could charge for something as it would shorten the queues," said a spokesman.

A design staff and an architect work on this exhibition from the moment the present one closes. So do a staff of 38 organizers, and nine on the sales management side. There are 105 exhibitors.

There are still more boys round the stands than girls, but the girls have more stamina. After six hours only 2.6 of the males were still absorbed last year. But the stalwart female contingent, preparing themselves for their adult life at the Sales, numbered 11.7.

Parties come from afar. There were 49 from Swansea, 26 from Rotherham and 45 from Cwm Bram last year.

And 1,000 workmen moved into the National Hall on 18 December, and worked non-stop until Christmas Eve.

This year a Litter Jungle is the central attraction, to try to encourage mites to throw their filthy lolly sticks and hundred-weights of unwanted handouts and catalogues into the mouths of giant beasts. Then their eyes light up. Reams of coloured paper will also be in readiness for artistic babes to cut out pieces and stick them on to a huge wall.

"It is always most difficult to find something to amuse the very young ones," said a spokesman, panting slightly.

The Zoo section is always very popular. This year there are giant tortoises from the Galapagos, and tiny coatis. Like their predecessors, the bush babies last year, they have strong lights on them at night to make them sleep, and less during the day. But they will be hard put to it to compete with the bush babies, which were terrible show-offs.

The Daleks were the greatest attraction last year. This year there is the biggest racing track in the world. It has eight lanes, each 80 ft long, with a straight stretch of 21-ft for budding Jim Clarks. There are also the secrets of TV Visual Effects including the construction of the props for the Agincourt sequence in Dr Who.

It is not always the glamorous exhibits that attract the most children. Last year the Institute of Science & Technology was constantly besieged because they bothered to have moving models and demonstrated a different laboratory technique every day. The audience ask most intelligent questions. "It's the small boys who wear glasses who catch us out most often," said one of the demonstrators.

On 8 January it closes down. And the organizers start all over again thinking up magnetic attractions for next Christmas.

"We are moving into the Empire Hall, which is half as big again," they told me, rubbing their hands. And the best of luck to them, I say. For it is a well-known fact that all fathers are schoolboys at heart and on this marathon and exhausting holiday ritual children can be accompanied by father without any feelings of guilt on the distaff side.

LAST-MINUTE NOTES

Pub hours. Christmas Day—as for Sunday (12-2; 7-10.30)—but it all depends on the publican as to whether or not they open. Christmas Eve and Boxing Day, extension till midnight. New Year's Eve, extension till 12.30

You can pick up a bird cheaply at one of the turkey auctions that take place around Smithfield Market. J T Hart, and Wolseys in Charterhouse St, are the ones that hold these auctions and by Christmas Eve they are usually selling them off pretty cheaply. Even if you don't want actually to buy a turkey, it's worth a visit to Smithfield on Christmas Eve to see the excitement

If you are crazy enough to want to watch people doing crazy things on Christmas Day you can go to the Serpentine to see the hardy take their annual Christmas dip (at 8.30 a.m.) or to Highgate Pond on Hampstead Heath, where this annual masochistic feat will be taking place at around 10 a.m.

TRANSPORT

Underground Services. Friday 24 December, Sunday 26 December, Monday 27 December, Similar to normal Sunday services. Saturday 25 December, about every 20 minutes in inner London; about every 40 minutes to outer London Bus Services. Saturday 25 December, normal Sunday services until 4 p.m.

Invaluable to know that there are various people and services that can come to your aid in an emergency if your Christmas plans go haywire at the very last moment:

Christmas dinners can be delivered at your door by Home Meal Delivery Service (EMP 5121) which is good to know if your plans are suddenly disorganized and you find yourself stuck in town without having made the usual preparations. Their special Christmas lunch costs 35s a head (Roast Norfolk turkey with usual trimmings, Christmas pudding with rum sauce and hot mince pies). They will also deliver drinks. They like to have as much notice as possible but say they will be able to help out anyone in a dire emergency. Deliveries on Christmas Day between 11.30 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Flowers or Flowering Plants can be delivered on Christmas Day to anyone in the London area by Floraphone (contact via Aircall at REG 2552). Orders can be placed at any time during the day or night, and within minutes the flowers will be put in a van and on their way. They would like to have orders in by morning of Christmas Eve or night before, so they can choose the flowers you want to send specially for you at Covent Garden, but they hope they will be able to deal with emergency calls on Christmas Day itself.

Emergency Baby-sitters, Home-helps &c. can be found by Problems Limited (TAT 8181). This is really a subscription service (5 guineas a year to join), but they will cope with SOS inquiries from non-members. Say that they will even supply two extra guests for your Christmas dinner if you find you have two vacant places. And will get a plumber or electrician for you if your pipes suddenly burst, or the fuses go.

If you have nothing to do on Christmas Day and are dreading the thought of spending it alone, you can telephone Problems Ltd, and offer them your services. They have several regular subscribers on their books who might welcome an extra pair of hands to help out in return for sitting down en famille to Christmas dinner and spending the rest of the day with them.

PRESENTS

It's a tense time when the presents are opened: which is more difficult - to give something ludicrous, or to receive something ludicrous? We asked some well-known people to say what, under ideal circumstances, they would like to give and receive

Russell Braddon wants to give to all the children under 11 electric toothbrushes
Sir Alan & Lady Herbert want to give each other a luxury trip round the world

Arnold Wesker wants to give his wife Dusty an open cheque on which she could travel round the world

Amanda Barrie wants to be given a walking bed, equipped with television, bookshelves, so that she could do her shopping at ease. In return she is prepared to give a great big kiss

Michael Flanders wants to be given a foolproof kite. "I'm not bothered about the style so long as the string is in the right place." In return he wants to give away some of the vast collection of plaster hippos that people send him from time to time: "We keep giving them to the child to play with, but she is too careful with them"

Betty Marsden wants to give her husband a 60-ft Bermudan sloop with every conceivable gadget and navigational aid on board. She would have it towed up the Thames on Christmas morning to moor alongside their houseboat at Isleworth

Peggy van Praagh (Artistic Director of the Australian Ballet) wants to give "a loyal and hard-working company a month in the sun"

Maxine Audley would like to be given "one of those automatic hockey games they have in France where everyone stands about and gets hysterical, with goal posts that light up and electric pucks." In return she would give a Polaroid camera

Cyril Connolly would like to be given a cheque for one million pounds. In return would give a receipt

Vidal Sassoon would like to be given a 1st-class return ticket to Honolulu - for five days only, because he would get bored for longer. In return he would give a him a her, and a her a him. And while he's in Waikiki they could use his London flat to sort it all out

Harold Hobson would like to receive the unattainable: "a walk on my feet." He would give in return: "all my cars"

Alexander Plunkett-Greene: his wife, Mary Quant, would like to receive a lion - they have plenty of cages. He would like to receive a nanny, a good solid type - nothing sexy - to bring him hot milk in bed, because his wife doesn't do that sort of thing

Mary Martin says: "I have gotten so much more out of life than I ever expected, I wish it was in my power to give half as much to everyone else"

Greetings from Brixton

Edited by Francis Wyndham

The elaborate pop-art Christmas card (right) and these eloquent love letters were sent from prison.

Rob is a young man of 24 serving a 10-year sentence for robbery with violence. Rosie is a married woman with a child called Johnnie: she lived with Rob for five months before his arrest. The letters evoke, and the card illustrates, a sentimental dream of life in the free world; they throw a revealing light on one type of criminal mentality. For Rob, the bitterness of his punishment lies only in his separation from Rosie

My Darling Rosie,

I want to say so much, I want to kiss and hold you and tell you everything will be alright. I feel so helpless in here, I've really had time to think over what happened between us Rose and what you mean to me, it's not easy to write it down as it's in my heart, I know I TRULEY LOVE YOU. I know your on your own out there with everyone saying "I told you this would happen Rose", I should be there making love to you and helping you, not writing. Oh Rosie it's so terrible being appart from you, yet so wonderful thinking of you, nobody can take that away from me as well.

I think of my little Rosie in the morning in her dressing-gown bringing "niggly nagging Rob" a cup of tea—Of the times we kissed and cuddled and how I held you tight—of the times we've laughed and how wonderful it was to see you happy—Of "ceaser" and little Johnnie's worms.—I think of you in curlers and of you asleep.—And of camping our happiest time, no worries, eh Rosie, remember Norfolk and "the hole" the motor fell in, also "the sea shall not have them" of Blackpool and rain rain rain. And of Wales and the sun and fun, coming home across the ferry and Rosie saying "Oh my kneck Rob."—I think of cooking in the middle of the night after making love—

Of little Johnnie and "lincoln buscuits" and "mince-meat"—Of my Rosie spending the money and us laughing over what you bought.—I think of going to the zoo's, the museums, the tower of London, the lane, on the River Boat, to the fairs at Hampton Court and Battersea, and to London Airport—Of our water fights, and pillow fight—Of you kissing me and telling me you loved me—I think of you looking lovely when we used to go out and although we did'ent go anywhere special we was happy.—Of Rosie the "Hypo" and Rob the "nagger".—Over the "chandallier night" the "witch night" and the "spider night".—I think of you dyeing your hair, and me saying "happy campers"—I think of us making love and Rosie so wonderful.—Of our records and the memouries they hold for us—Of us in love. Oh Rosie we did so much in so short a time. There are hundreds more things I could write over what we done together darling, big and little things that mean so much. They all mean we loved each other so much we did'ent realise this terrible thing would happen, yet it has, I can't believe it, how can we live without each other NOW after going through so much and loving each other like we do. Oh God.

When I see you cry on the visit I think of you at your Mums all alone, so terribly alone and with everything inside you ready to explode and all fall to pieces and you feel so lost and filled with pain. This letter is from my heart Darling somehow I pray it will stop some of your hurt because somehow we must both hope. If we don't we'll both break down and be ill. Think of all the troubles and worries we had right from the beginning Rosie yet we beat them all somehow and was still happy my love. Somehow we'll beat this as well. I talk to you every night before I go to sleep and tell you I love you and please don't worry so you listen tonight and tell me back!

Remember I'll be with you soon. My love to the little chap and your Mum and Dad. Please try not to worry as I worry for you my Darling. Forever

... I'm sorry about acting like that on the visit with Mum this afternoon, Rosie but I tried so hard not to. This has really hit me very hard Rosie, the last thing in the world I want to do is upset you and make you worry about me. It's just that your THERE on a visit 6 INCHES AWAY and you look so beautiful and I want to give you ALL my love and I can't because I can't hold your hand or kiss you or touch your hair or make you FEEL my love the way I want to. You see I KNOW I've got to wait God knows how long before we can sit hand in hand. Oh Rosie I DO need you, your love, all of you so terribly much. I wished I could explain it properly. If they said I could go FREE but without you I'de stay in here forever rather than have that, without you now I'm dead. Writing this has given me some strength back my Darling it's made me HOPE again. What I've wrote comes from really deep down in my heart Rosie it'll Never Never change. I feel so terribly lost without you and so alone and feeble yet my love for you is strong and wonderful you bring emotions out of me I've never had happen before to me, how I feel, things I do, Oh Rosie I'm all yours and I want ALL of YOU forever and ever Amen. I've talked a lot about myself again Rosie, forgive me eh! you've made me look up again. I thought I was hard in a lot of ways yet when it comes to our love I'm defencless, I'm wide open, anything against it hurts me so hard like being away from you and the fears of someone hurting you inside ...

... It would be terrific if you could save up for a car Rosie and take your test you'de be quite "the lady about town" (no lifts to strangers!) or it's on you—HA HA. Really though Rosie with driving lessons, a little job, join the library and night school (Poor Rosie) the time will whizz by, plus of course looking after little Johnnie and your Dad. But you mus'ent stay in No 3 all the time doing all the work, you'll wear away Rosie, honest, Oh plus exercises every morning (up one two three, up one two three) must keep the figure in terrific form (for a top-less). Seriouise though Rosie if I thought you'd be over the kitchen sink all day working and your hands getting all hard I'd die of worry. Even though we're away from each other you must still try and be happy in your own way (did I say that right). And Rob will take the G.C.E. and study the "City and Guilds exams" and write Rosie a Book.

I'm glad you like my Mum and Dad Rosie, don't forget what I said if times get very bad and you get lonely pop round and see my people if it will help. Remember one day your going to bear them a grandchild . . . I'd die if I didn't see you every day, soon we will only be able to see each other once a MONTH, we'll both have to be brave then eh Rosie, it's got to be faced, my dear poor Rosie that sounds so cruel, I didn't mean it to be, Oh Rosie I feel so lost without YOU, if it hurts me so much what does it do to my Rosie, Of I don't want her hurt please God. If only only they would have mercy and give up ONE silly Rob, I'm sorry Rosie I'm writing all wronge again . . . Pew that was close, I'm thinking of you outside on your own so I'm OK now, selfish Rob Rosie, it's harder for you than me so be brave. If only people KNEW how brave you was.

You know when I'm not loving you I'm going to take you to lots of places like museums, parks, exhibitions, etc, you, me, and little Johnnie and happiness, we'll never be bored because we'll have so MUCH love we'll go everywhere. And like you say in your letter Rosie we'll move right away to live and make new friends and be forever happy . . .

. . . I'm so bloody mad who does that Mrs C think she is, she's not fit enough to tread where you have trod let alone touch you. The swine better not. Oh I could knock this door down in frustration because I can't do anything in HERE to help you. Just what BUSINESS has she got poking her big nose in anyway, they are ALL the same, they all want to run your life Rosie, your not allowed to have any happiness, you've got to be a SLAVE to everyone all your life then your OK, good old Rosie. Well this time they will ALL loose because I love you dearly and I'll give you all my LOVE and STRENGTH to fight against them. They think they are going to win because I'm not there and because they have beaten you in the past. But they don't KNOW I'm in YOUR HEART though do they Rosie, we'll beat them with love. Their weapons will be horrid words, fists, anger, extortion, vileness and violence. Ours will be LOVE, our LOVE, nothing else . . . Now don't keep looking for the Sexy bits, it's not this letter, if your a good girl in the morning I'll send you the Sexy one for the weekend OK! . . . I often read my letters afterwards and wish they was being sent to me, they are so nice, she's a lucky girl who gets them . . . Oh I worship you. I believe in Rose. I'm the one and only number one fan of the "Rosie Fan Club". In fact I AM the "Rosie Fan Club", I don't want anybody else to join, I want you all for myself as your the only member of my fan club. We'll join clubs - "The Rosie and Rob Fan Clubs" (no members but US) . . .

. . . I think of the time (remember) when I said "they won't get me" to people, oh you flash teddy boy Rob, I said "I know what I'm doing" flash oh I was flash, but somehow I fealt so safe with you Darling, our love was so strong I just, oh you know Rosie we was just oh so much in love we did'ent worry we could'ent think (remember HA HA) even if we tried. We'll be the same again . . . I BELIEVE in your love (SILLY) mus'ent never say that again ay

(it's sacked HA HA) mus'ent tempt providence. I WANT you to be possessive, I want you to possess all of me because I MUST HAVE ALL OF YOU (ALWAYS) oh always, we'll never be each others Governor, always EQUAL (well being a MAN I suppose I must obviously be the Guv, common sense ay Rosie HA HA) Oh it's on me. . . .

. . . Oh I'm sorry love it's so silly me writing this way, it won't help us, it's just that I feel like crying out to you, you know. If I could only DO something to OCCUPIE (HA HA) my mind. Now you've made me laugh, I'm crying and YOU make me laugh, thank you darling, I'm so mixed up, things keep coming into my mind, my head goes round & round and I walk round & round my cell like something in a zoo, then I suddenly feel so very alone and lost, and I think of you alone and lost and it's all so frightening and terrible. . . . You've got Rob for LIFE now Rosie and I'll be your HUSBAND (& DAD) You'll never get rid of me now, honest (not meant bad) if I never saw you for 10 yrs I'd still love you and make you happy (you've got no say in it) I'd kidnap you (mad Rob the kidnapper) - Oh suppose I went MAD Rosie (you crankRob)seriouise though, you'd never get rid of me I'd keep kidnapping you and taking you to the country (tie you to the BED mmm . . . xxx) HA HA oh I'm laughing, this is a nutty letter (I'm turning already) . . . I've got to say this, you MUST TELL ME in your next letter if you feel the same thing. OK, Well somehow we're still a bit SHY on the Visits, Do you feel it? considering we loved each other for 5 months on the outside it's strange (Did I say that right - hope so) There's nothing wronge in it, I've had a good think and I think you've been waiting for Rob to say something about the visits, you know just in the back of your mind (& mine), I know the officer who sits behind me puts me off from saying things on the visit, he's like an intruder into our love, do you feel him there sometimes as well? Sometimes I write some things in a letter to you and I say to myself "I must TELL Rosie that tomorrow, must make her see how much she's loved and needed" Then I go and DON'T say it (I've gone Red now) Oh I must be SHY, I'm sorry darling honest I try (you've got to be Guv and SEDUCE me) Rob's a failure (BOOOO) - not really, HA HA, I'm just shy (BOOOO) Oh I can't think of an excuse, quick Rosie think of one (BOOOO) got one "We LOVE each so much we get lost for words" (HURAAA) - I won't! . . .

. . . Hello love, it's Sunday morning and I've just got up (7.30) BRRRR bit nippy. I'm still half asleep, I had a lovely dream about you last night (honest) must tell you. Well we was in the sea on a great big boat, you know a big liner. We seemed to be the only people on board except lots of seagulls (which you kept feeding) you kept saying to me "Oh Rob I don't want to go back never" & I said we'd never go back I promis, we are together now forever and we'll sail round the world in happiness forever. Then suddenly you said "Oh look Rob Dad used to work over there (Esso)" and I looked and see we was sailing down the river Thames towards Putney (how we got there I don't know) you got all excited & said "quick Rob turn the ship round I don't want to go back" and you started to cry. I dashed up to the bridge and turned the ship round & headed out to sea again (The ship was miles to big to even sail up the river let alone turn round, but dreams are strange) When I came back you was crying in happiness and the sea was all round us again, I put my arms tightly around you & we kiss and sailed away happy and contentedly in love. - Then I woke up. Oh I had to tell you, it was so lovely, all true (Promis) Oh I'm mad but I wanted to tell you right away, see your with me in sleep as well. I wish we was on a ship. . . . Do you know Rose it's nearly diner time, I've been sitting here thinking of you and dreaming for 4 hours, 4 hours oh Rob you hav'ent even had a wash, TU-TUT, I don't want a wash I want to think of Rosie. . . . Sausy Rose now you know Wendy did'ent come to see me at no 13 and she was always popping round now I come to think of it, HUM (thinks), I don't know about on me I think it's on you (lovely). Do you know in the 5 weeks I've been here you've stopped being a hypo Rosie (honest) I think you just used to get me at it (I loved it), no more mumps, stif knecks, sore toes, spots on your bum or andrews. Well well my Rosie is reforming. Oh your so sweet Rosie, so lovely and frank and open, to me your everything, I remember sometimes at 2 o'clock in the morning you used to look at me all nice and soft and cuddly and say "I'm hungry Rob" and Rob would go and make you something in the cold and you used to be ASLEEP when I brought it in (HA HA). But I loved you for it. . . . You know in my own way I got to love little Johnnie Rosie, when we have children I'll never put them before him (HONEST) you don't know Rob I can be very strict you know, I could never hit a child I don't think, but I'd do it my own way, you understand me Rosie don't you. Even though I shouted at little Johnnie a few times in the END I hardly did, & in only 4 months he respected uncle Rob even if nothing else (I think he liked me a bit ay). I think I done right Rosie in a little longer time I know he would of liked me a lot. Still here's a big kiss X for him how's that. Always remember please Rosie that Rob EXCEPTS Johnnie and knows Rosie loves her little baby. This is part of my Rosie. I never want it to change please believe me.

. . . Oh God Rosie I don't know how to beat this thing over us but somhow your letter did and it helped Rob again. I'm useless Rosie honest Darling I'm getting OH SHUT UP ROB, listen I can't seem to explain, -look I think of our - Rosie it's just, oh I CAN'T explain - I'm lost Rose, I'm honestly one terribly mixed up fella - oh Blast - START AGAIN (count to Ten 1-2-3-4-5-6-7-8-9-10-X-O) Right - Ready (Hold my hand my Darling) Well I read all your letters Rosie and I LOVE YOU ALWAYS (I screamed that right from my heart to your heart) But please my Darling please be patient (patiance is a virtue) Oh I said that wrong again Rosie I'm NOT looking for sympathy, there is nothing more sad than a pathetic man, I know when the time comes I'll face whatever sentence I get somehow & help and love you over the very bad times to come. Darling in my heart I KNOW I'll go down, I think you do too (your very Brave) This I have FACED you must understand and believe me Please. But I can't control my mind, I think what I think and try afterwards to sort it out (you see?) I must be always HONEST with you in what I write, I'll never say anything unless it's the real truth. . . . WHY WHY WHY when we LOVED each other and were so GOOD did it HAPPEN???? That's what is really hurting me, Rosie, NOT the dought of your LOVE (silly) But the fact that we will both have to suffer so much when we deserve only HAPPINESS for the love (that is so big) we have for each other. I'm not challenging our love or not thinking of our future, I'm just plain LOVING you so very very much and wanting you oh God so MUCH it crushes me, smashes me, knocks me down, stamps on me, BUT OUR LOVE PICKS ME UP, I'm not tempting anything Rosie it's just ME. Oh I've wasted this whole letter trying to explain and got it all wrong again, oh love it's no good Rob's just not with it, he's an egg because all he has wrote applies to ROSIE as well and SHE doesn't complain (she's wonderful that's why) . . .

. . . I am definatly going to write you a book Rosie, it's not easy but I shall read all about authorship, you know learning how to write, once I learn the actual book will be easier then, you never know it might sell! What shall I write, about US? or a murder, western, space - ZUM - ZUM we make so many noises ay Rosie HA HA. I'll write a nutty space book, you can be um! Rosie the Robot - have to be a sexy Robot Serious, or a thriller, I think I'll write a thriller, you know with lots of thrills in it (terrific) - I'll have to leave Books, I'm getting carried away again. I'm going to read a lot about boats and sailing Rosie as one day, honest, I want to buy a boat for us Darling, nothing big but a nice one we can go on hollidays in. It would be terrific can you imagin it Rosie, & with no worries, sailing round the norfolk broads oh we'd live on it, oh Rob come down, yes I know I dream Rosie, I know there are more important things to do than read about boats. The main thing I will do is take a Buisness Managment and Corispondence Course if I can then the GCE in Carpentry & Joinery so as I'll have a trade to come home to, then once we've saved enough from me working in Joinery we can buy a little Buisness and that's where the Buisness Managment Course will be very handy. In my spare time I'll paint & read & read & read so as when I come home to you we will have more than enough hobbies & interests in life to keep us always happy and so in love. . . . You see once you get a little job, I don't mind where as long as you think it's OK & as long as it's a bit interesting & your not taken liberties with by anyone or anything like that, really Rosie I don't want you to do cleaning, it's so boring & hard, no I don't like that, my Rosie is'ent going to scrub other people's stairs & kitchens, you've had enough of that in the past Darling. Garages are not bad Rosie it's not hard & not to dull & I know you'd like to work in a Pub (Shandies only HA HA) anyway when you make up your mind whimsicle, oh what about mum's laundry? nice and warm in the winter, no? Oh well not to worry, "Nurse give this man an enima" oh Rosie your nutty, nurse, you'll be a lion taimer next. NO SPENDING THE MONEY, must save you got that, & no excuses you'll have to show ME the bank Book every month. So my darling with a little bit of luck we'll be able to make All our Dreams come true. . . .

Do you remember the night we went to Hendon and then on to that Dancehall the "California" and it was Pete's 21st Birthday, we had a nice time & remember the other times in the pub when they all used to sing (& do that "Stones" clap) it was a laugh, no front it was good fun. And then we used to go home and make love (that is if you did'ent go to sleep) . . . How can we bear being apart Rosie! Remember the night I went with Tony to get a car & he came and told I was arrested, we both died that night, you wrote me a long letter, remember, & then I came home to you, oh we was SO HAPPY, & I ate my tea & you took my shoes off, oh we was happy, it makes me nearly cry Rosie, we love each other so much, I'll always remember that night "Move Over Darling" night...

. . . I was walking on exercise today Rosie and a big green fluffy caterpilar was walking in front of me, really, funny I thought of little Johnnie (worms and moths) Oh and spiders, insects facernate him, anyway I picked this caterpilar up and it reminded me of how when I was a kid I found one the same (called a privit hawk moth) and my Dad showed me how to feed it with privit bushes, and I kept it all summer and then in the winter it crawled into the ground and the following summer Dad dug it up and it was a big brown cricilid, and I watched it come out (fascinated) of its shell to become a beautiful huge moth. Really, it made me wish I could of done the same with todays one for Johnnie . . . (sigh) . . .

Hark at me on about caterpillars, m . . . I LOVE you, you looked really "class" on the visits Rosie in the black and white outfit, mm . . . nice, mustardXX truth I liked it very much, see blouses suit you. Rosie winding me up about that bloke in the Roehampton garage (my Revenge is nearxx) I bet you wound him up as well. Has it occurred to you you wonderful thing that you are desirable and definatly sexy and that if you so cared you could wind up and excite numerous men (me included - sometimes) so Darling you DON'T have to keep PROOVING it to yourself. I only said "sometimes" to wind you up (your getting flash HA HA) So watch it wonderful.

Kids are nice (sometimes) and I remember when you used to say "Poor Johhnie" when he was asleep and then sigh - well I felt the same when I found that caterpillar today - Really Rose.

I've got caterpillars on the mind today (better than "teapots" HA HA) Did I tell you about the caterpillar? - Shut up Rob - (Pardon). By the way I could'ent smell any SCENT on your letters! Was you fibbing to Rob! (one B.M. if you was) How's the decorating? still at it? or have you gone on "strike" again (sacked yourself HA HA) Better not, must have it all nice for Rob next month.

You know I don't mind if you go on an "outing" with Mum, still from what you told me about outings and from what I heard etc etc, unless you have a kiss and cuddle (at least) your classed as a snob and bad sport and should'ent go on an outing in the first place. If that's so then I definatly would'ent want you to go, I'd hate to think someone was kissing my Rosie (I'd knock you out - splosh) And as for cuddling her Oh - crash, bang, smack - owwww - HAHA. Really Rosie you know how I feel (I was the same outside). I mean to say phone calls 12 months later is a bit stronge HUM HUM (it's on me now). But Darling if you was to be truthful all this about Outings is to get poor old Rob at it, so I say (because I love, respect and trust you) if you want to go by all means do (But firstly hang a notice round your neck "KEEP OFF, ROB'S PROPERTY".) OK xxxxxx if you're good you can have my Caterpiler. . . .

. . . Remember your first Blow (no result) and Tony kept nudging me HA HA. Oh we was mad. And then he came round and got drunk on Vodka and fancied Valerie HA HA. He was alright, Tony, better than the rest really (always tipsy). Somehow with us none of these things were Bad, with most people these things would of been sins and degradation because they either don't understand or when they themselves indulge they get out of control. But with us I know it was OK, it was a laugh and if we could've had it we didn't miss it. I remember we had both a Blow and Drink for a few months yet when we didn't have it we just said "Oh well not to worry" and that was that. Oh Darling no wonder people didn't and don't understand us, we HAVE SOMETHING which they ALL waited (and wanted) to collapse and when it didn't they were all sick, because they have never had what we HAVE and it really sickens them. They all had a go at parting us (and still will you see) yet they got nowhere and NEVER will. . . .

. . . I felt you were a lot happier this morning Rose, we were extra close today, I think now we know I'm going up soon we don't feel so lost (somehow), it'll soon be over Darling, you see, then (no matter what happens) we can really look to the future. Yes I dream of our future Rose, your letter on Dreams was nice Rose, of course I Dream and Plan and hope about us and our future, you'd be surprised how much, like you Rose I think of the small HOMELY things that are so loving, I always want YOU to come home to - to think I'll be coming home Friday nights with the Wages and I'll creep up behind you with a box of chocolates (you'll be cooking the tea) and I'll go "Bo" and you'll spin round and we'll kiss then I'll hold you & give you the chocolates. Then we'll both sit down and on the table will be a tin of tobacco and we'll both laugh and be so in love, I'll say "guess how much I can't this week love - bonus and back-pay as well - £25, terrific A" and we'll be happy. £10 Rosies housekeeping, £5 our savings, £1 on the car, £2 Johnnies school blazer, £1 Rosies club, 10s. washing machine, etc, etc - Oh it'll be wonderful Rosie, really. And then there will be the day when you say to me (with a wonderfully happy and secret look) "Rob something has happened, I'll give you three guesses" and you'll come and sit on my lap - and I'll think HUM? "you've burnt the frying-pan handle" (we'll laugh) - "No" - "you've got the mumps" HA HA - "No" - HUM? last guess "you've bought another telly" - "No" - And I'll say "your winding me up Rosie - tell me" and we'll kiss very slowly and lovingly, then you'll say "Rob I'm going to have a BABY". Oh Rosie just thinking of you saying that makes my heart reach out to you. Darling we'll be so wonderfully Happy one day I know. I'm like you Rosie I want to move away into the country, I know we can, I feel the same as you Rose (inside), all the so called "good times" are really nothing because once they are over there is NOTHING. But with us Rose it is different, let people have their parties and flash cars and money etc (it's all front). We'll have our Love and our little Dreams and Us. . . .

this, it's not human—I haven't faced it yet Rosie, your letter helped so much Darling, in fact so much that you have given me hope again—FOR US—our love IS bigger than anything, if I knew I had you to come home to I could do 20 yrs Rosie—it's so terribly unfair, I've ruined everything I'll never ruin you, never, I know I could be a wonderful husband to you Darling, Why why why didn't they let me . . . Will you tell my Mum & Dad not to worry please Rosie, I don't know what else to say except I love them too. I'll be able to face things better soon Rosie at the moment I don't know how I'm holding together it's only the thought of you that keeps me sane. . . .

. . . I'm glad you liked the card, yes it was for YOU, god you deserve so much I'd move mountains for you if only I could, I'd send you a card every day as well if only I could sweetheart oh I am glad you liked it as I really MEANT everything I wrote in it Rosie, and lots more to, your so nice and all mine . . . I'm so glad your going round my Mums Boxing Day Rosie, Dad come up Saturday & I said you was so he's going to put the Decorations up for you, pop round & see him if you can Darling as he really likes you, he does, he's a funny old stick but a lovely man at heart & somehow I imagin you & him will be pals, he gets lazy Xmas so you'll have to push him a bit. Oh Rosie it's so nice of you to buy those presents for my Family, you should've but I love you for it Darling . . . I dread Xmas as well Rose, I can never tell you how much but somehow Darling we MUST try and smile, we really must Rose, we've got to be happy Xmas time or we'll die love, I don't know how, I really don't because every day we're appart is killing us as it is—Christmas is such a happy occasion with presents, Christmas trees, nuts, decorations, turkeys

& snow etc. Oh wouldn't we of had a lovely time TOGETHER . . . Rosie do you realise that we WON'T be appart 6 yrs (Oh God that kills me) in the next two years everybody tells me this PAROLL system will come in, in fact it's got to because there are so many long term prisoners now, and it will mean I'll only do $\frac{1}{3}$ (one-third) which is 3 yr 4 months (four months is already nearly gone) So Darling we still have hope (yes Rob) Yes Yes. . . . Both your letters were wonderful, really Angel I can't tell you how wonderful—Kisses & Purfume—in a way they was lovelier than—Oh I can't explain, I just needed them so much that's why. There's so much to answer I don't know where to begin but firstly "What do I think of you MODELLING" W-E-L-L (come close) Darling honestly I think it's wonderful and I wish you all the luck in the world FROM MY HEART, your mad asking me not to think Bad, this is your Rob you know, why should I mind, there are hundreds of girls who model, why should I think bad because you undress, mind you Rosie, please be carefull love, I don't know how far you are going to go, you sound very excited, I could've read any of the purfumed letter as it was stained love so I'm still in the dark. This scent smells gorgeous, on the second page of your letter your telling me all about modelling but the scent has stained all of it so all I can read is "Parade, Men only—False hair, biking bottom, Top Hat?—think it over—you don't mind do you?—Green night-dress—nothing?" Love has changed you, now you are free, you've always wanted to feel this hav'nt you Rose, the King's Head opened you up a bit I think, I'm glad your working there, you should dress up, you should've stay at home all the time, it's bad, your young and pretty and for so long this was taken away from you—Now my Rosie is Modelling, well well you never know, this could be a whole new career for you Rose BUT also it may not be so we must look at it both ways (yes Rob), you musn't get too excited incase it don't work out, understand love we must look at it this way, for a start there are lots of models agreed? and modelling is a very cut-throat business. There are a lot of girls who will go a long way for money especially in modeling & even worse there are a lot of Model Agencies where all they really want is Pornographic Photos & "Business"—So DARLING please you must be careful for your sake & mine, I don't mean that Bad love, I don't want to see you hurt that's all. Also there are a lot of HONEST agencies & straight photographers & good people in modelling, so love if you MAKE SHORE your Agency has a good name first everything will work out fine. I'm not naging am I Rose, I love you so much, what a lovely problem you are. By the way the "Men Only" use "Nude Posers", are you Modeling in the Nude (you better not be) not until we SEE each other on our visit, if your thinking of it you can't until you see me and tell me all about it. Listen OK I know your no fool Darling, you can look after yourself & as you said "you know me by now Rob"—Oh Rosie I trust you 100 per cent, that don't even come into it—it's just that there are some very very nasty people in this world, infact loads of them (look what they done to us) so don't think you can beat them all because you can't—Oh I'm a rotten sport, your thrilled to bits and it sounds as though I'm blocking it, well Darling I'm not, I'm thrilled as well, my girl a model—terrific, I am really pleased for you, it could be a chance in a lifetime. You should get more than £2 an hour though, what have you got to sign Rose? a contract? please write and tell me all about it. Oh I love you cranky, you'll be a bus driver next m . . . sexy. I bet you look oh Great, will you send me some in, ALL OF THEM.

. . . I CAN'T be possessive in here love, I'm in a cell all night every night, I've got no out, if I let my mind "Think possessively" it would explode Darling, say I think of this bloody Photographer taking pictures of you in the nude, your MINE, I don't even want him to LOOK at you, I hate him, supposing he's a pervert, supposing he gives you a drink with a sleeping drug in it, I don't want him looking at your body at all different angles—you see Rose, its madness, mad mad mad, I havn't got an evil mind love, you know that, but if I get Possessive it winds me up terribly, don't worry I'm worse than you, I'm not prudish or dirty-minded but I'm human & I love you sencerely with all my heart, it's not normal in here Darling, it's mind destroying, everything is out of proportion and SEX is the biggest mind killer, it's such a big thing it MUST BE FORGOTTEN—not completely forgotten, just not thought about, I can joke and go sssss mmmmm sexy, I fancy you, but if I REALLY think of you sexually Rosie, Good God Darling we had to many lovely results—On the visit we'll talk about this, I should of said it before then you would of realised your Rob is possessive instead of thinking I love you "Regardless". Rosie I don't even want anybody to Kiss you. Remember you was going to the "outing" and you said "everyone kisses on an outing Rob" but I wouldn't have it. I know it's even harder for you out there than it is for me in here because out there there are "temptations" & in here there are "none" (well nearly none) but Darling our love is stronger than ALL of them, never once have we been slightly unfaithfull to each other & we NEVER will be. Maybe I sound 16 but I'm not I'm just madly in love with you . . . I'm glad Johnnie & the Family are OK, give my love to them and my Family Rose. Now my darling I must close. Oh love. Forever and ever your own ROB

Bond films start with a bang; the audience is arrested at once by a swift, brutal pocket-adventure which usually has no connection with the main story of the film but which generates tension not to be dissipated by the following credits. Remember the garrotting in From Russia with Love; the reflection of an assassin in a girl's eyes in Goldfinger . . . in the latest, Thunderball, Bond has his kinkiest confrontation to date.

1 The country is France, the setting a church. Bond attends the funeral of 008, an agent recently killed

2 Also there, the agent's widow, a striking figure in black, elegant yet somehow different from the women who usually populate Bond's life – older, maybe

3 Bond follows her home, to a splendid château, which for all its objets d'art is strongly fortified

4 Suddenly Bond is left at the woman's mercy, known for his cavalier attitude, apart from the insult never offered physically
5 But of course, he never offered physically
6 The woman fights back
7 It is now a battle of wits
8 the elegant widow's midriff

s and projects a straight James is amoral, well-

with equal strength

7 All is revealed, Bond whips off the blonde wig and we know what he knew – no widow this, but 008's killer in drag

8 It's a fight to the death of course, a number of objects get broken and finally Bond stashes away the body and prepares his escape from the guarded château

9 To do this he uses a jump jet, or jump belt, a one-man rocket pack which has been developed by American firms with encouragement from the US Defence Department

10 In a cloud of smoke up and away he goes over the castle. With one of these packs a man can leap 200 yards at 40 mph and hang suspended in mid-air – that's the actual performance, but Bond's equipment is naturally slightly more powerful

Now the audience can relax with the credits . . .

Thunderball opens on 29 December at the London Pavilion

What's in a Diary?

By Jane Wilson

British diary consumption is second only to that of the West Germans, and far outstrips that of our nearest competitors, the Dutch. This Christmas 63 per cent of all the 20 million users in Britain will be presented with either desk or pocket diaries. A neglected 36 per cent will thereafter go out and buy their own, and a mysterious one per cent will later have no idea at all how they came to be in possession of The Civil Engineer's Diary for 1966. They are the 'don't knows' in every diary manufacturer's market research charts.

Diaries allow you to get a grip on your own identity, to make a note not only of your name and address but also of the number of your car, passport, National Insurance card, blood group, bank book, premium bonds, dog licence, driving licence, and life and fire insurance policies. If you have a Boy Scout's Diary you can also record your size in hats and shoes, the span of your thumb and forefinger, and the distance from the middle of your kneecap to the ground. Owners of the Mirabelle Disc-Star Diary have a special section to fill in entitled 'All About My Steady' which requires details of his chest and collar sizes, his pet hates and likes, his favourite drink and pop stars. Diaries are clearly invaluable in cases of amnesia. Many of them now contain a loose sheet of paper stickers marked with things like 'tomorrow is my wife's birthday' and 'tomorrow my holidays start.'

But the most important function of all pocket diaries must be to provide basic, essential information. Did you know that lighting-up time on 4 April (the Feast of St Ambrose) will be at 8.15 p.m., and that Quinquagesima next year falls on 20 February? On that day high water will occur at London Bridge at 1.59 a.m. and 2.27 p.m. We are now in the year 6679 of the Julian period, and the Vernal Equinox will begin at 1 a.m. next 21 March. Lammas will be celebrated in Scotland on 1 August. Any diary will keep you informed about these things, but only Collins Royal & Merchant Naval Diary contains the fact that a married Admiral of the Fleet earns £7,774 a year.

Collins take great pride in the technical data included in specialist works such as The Architect's & Builder's Diary. "It's not done casually, you know. We don't just put in any old thing. University professors and experts work on this with us, and because we have a new edition every year we are often able to be much more up-to-date than the textbooks." Collins and Letts, the two largest manufacturers, produce between them about 74 different specialist diaries, apart from the hundreds of others that are printed by special arrangement for various social, cultural, political, and commercial organizations. If you, and a minimum of 150 other people, would like a diary of some special group significance, Collins will produce it for you. But the chances are that you have already been catered for admirably in the diaries available this year.

Here are a dozen popular versions — with selected extracts:

JANUARY

*Royal Horticultural Society
Gardener's Diary*

"Should severe frost threaten, protect Celery and Globe Artichokes with straw or bracken. Increase the protective material of Potatoes both in sheds and clamps. Where slugs are troublesome, protect the crowns of Delphiniums, Lupins, Pyrethrums, etc., with well-weathered cinders."

FEBRUARY

The Pony Club Diary

"Not for the lust of killing, not for the places of pride,
Nor for the hate of the hunted
we English saddle and ride,
But because of the gift of our fathers the blood in our veins that flows,
Must answer for ever and ever the challenge of 'Yonder he goes!'"

MARCH

The Churchman's Diary

"Notes on the Lectionary — The Proper Psalms given first are those of the Table of Psalms for Use on Sundays and certain Other Holy Days adopted experimentally by the Convocation of Canterbury in 1960."

APRIL

Motor Boat and Yachting Diary

International Code — Morse and Single-Letter Flag Signals: (---) Man Overboard. (-...) I am taking in or discharging explosives.

MAY

The Melody Maker Diary

"A Few Tips For Songwriters — For the purpose of proving when a song was written, you can register your song, and its title, at Stationers Hall, London EC 4. There is no actual copyright in a title itself, and although plagiarism is rare a publisher may plead 'colourable imitation'. This can arise through the publicity given to one song being used to exploit another song with a similar title."

JUNE

The Gentleman's Diary

Public School fees:

Boys: Eton £535, Fettes £450, Gordonstoun £594, Harrow £534, Malvern £492.

Girls: Benenden £525, Roedean £525, Sherborne £450, Wycombe Abbey £501.

JULY

Cat Lovers Diary

"Licences are not required for cats or catteries, but it is wrong to suppose that cats have no rights in the eyes of the Law."

AUGUST

The Ballet Diary

"Dancers who grow too tall for ballet can have interesting and lucrative careers with such dance troupes as those of Miss Bluebell, and Monsieur Charley, both based on Paris."

SEPTEMBER

The Business Woman's Dairy

"A married woman has now unlimited contractual capacity and can sue and be sued on any valid contract she enters into. Apart from this, by marriage and cohabitation she can — and usually does — act as agent for her husband, and on these contracts the husband alone is liable."

OCTOBER

The Farmers' Diary

"General Class Licences are issued for bulls which are found to be suitable as regards their conformation, freedom from disease and power to beget satisfactory progeny but are unable to fulfil the special requirements for a Beef or Dairy Licence."

NOVEMBER

Enid Blyton Diary

"Of course there is a competition too — a very exciting one this time! If the entries are as good as last year's it will be very difficult to decide the winners. This year, for a change, I would like you to make me a picture. You can make it in any way you like..."

DECEMBER

The Ballroom Dancing Diary

"It is true that these Latin-American dances require much less space than English style dances and they can be thoroughly enjoyed on a really crowded floor. For many however they will never take the place of the beautiful flowing movement, and the more subtle rhythmic expression, of the English style which is surely a truer expression of British temperament."

Edward de Bono is a compulsive inventor. He is 32, a Rhodes' Scholar from Malta, and a medical scientist at Cambridge. He is at the moment on a year's visit to Harvard.

He uses what he calls "applied frivolity of mind" to produce simple time and money-saving devices – a means of preventing his car from being towed away, a pair of half-lensed dark glasses for night driving. In the medical field he has invented a whistle, inspired by children's whistles, to test lungs, and a needle, simply injected into an artery, to check heart conditions. He also invents games, which he plays avidly – one of his games, which he called the L-Shaped Game, is being marketed and can be programmed into a computer. All his games are graphic, witty developments of essentially simple ideas. Here are two for Christmas:

The first one is called Decision. It simply depends on your ability to judge what someone else will do, and what they think you will do. Any clash, and all involved return, infuriated, to the starting point.

To start with each of the four players needs a token with his number on it—1, 2, 3 or 4. Each player also needs a card which can be covered by his hand, saying "Left" on one side, "Right" on the other side. This will be used for indicating his move. A coin will do, heads—right, tails—left.

Four individually competitive people may play the game—or it may be played in couples, as bridge, (1 and 3 versus 2 and 4) which is amusing de Bono says, "because you can yell at your partner when he louses things up." Two people may play, with two tokens each.

The board shows a central square, which is the goal, from which radiate avenues, in direct, black lines, and streets, the indirect white lines. These avenues and streets meet at junctions—the black blobs. The aim is to travel from your starting corner to the central square, along the roads. Tokens may only be placed on the blobs at street junctions; moves may only be made along the roads. Under no circumstances is it permissible to move along the avenues.

Each player places his token on his corner; then he decides whether he will move left or move right or stand still along the roads. He indicates his decision with his card or coin, keeping it covered with his hand until all the players have decided. If his decision is to stand still he will have removed his card or coin, but kept his hand there.

The decisions are then revealed simultaneously, and the moves executed. But if two players find themselves on the same avenue at the end of the moves, both those players must return to their starting corner. And if there is already a player on the avenue to that corner, then he too must return to his starting corner.

The player to reach the square first, wins.

The second game is called Hexagons. Each player needs a set of six regular hexagons, which are distinguishable as his by colour, and numbered from 1-6. We have provided them, ready for cutting out, for four players, but more may play.

Each player takes it in turn to start the game, and each player takes it in turn to place one of his hexagons on the table. A hexagon may be placed anywhere on the table, provided that it has one of its edges in common with a hexagon that is already on the table. It may have more than one of its edges in common.

As each hexagon is set down, a reckoning is made. Its number is compared with the number (or numbers) of the other hexagon (or hexagons) touching it. The owner of the hexagon with the smallest number "pays" the owner of the hexagon with the larger number the difference, i.e., a hexagon numbered 2 set down to touch a hexagon numbered 5 must pay the owner of 5, 3 points. And if it is also set down to touch a hexagon numbered 1, then its owner receives 1 point from the owner of 1. And so on. Money, or counters, may be used, or simply keep a score sheet.

When all players have set down their hexagons in turn and all reckonings have been made, as a final twist, each player in his turn may pick up one of his hexagons and set it down in another place. Then the final reckoning is made.

Theatre

Many of the shows put on specifically for the Christmas period seem designed more to recapture the lost youth of parents rather than to arrest a new generation that takes television and lunar exploration in its stride. Not that Goldilocks and the Three Space Probes has much appeal, and that blatant cashing-in on television and space The Curse of the Daleks (matinées at Wyndhams) seems chillingly far from both Christmas and the theatre.

For the children of today are the audience of tomorrow, and it seems a pity that such an opportunity of showing a child what the theatre is like should arrive for only three weeks out of every year, leaving the other 49 free for parents to find something that doesn't bore the pants off an eight-year-old. At the moment there are nine shows—not counting seasonable operas, ballets and pantomimes—to which, theoretically, one could escort a dozen assorted infants without having the evening end in an agony of tears or petulance.

Some managements however do make the most of the opportunity offered under the excuse of Christmas. The Royal Shakespeare Company has a children's play by Robert Bolt, which though about dragons and things, is most certainly literate and a definite cut above talking cats. At Guildford, Stage 60's last year's production of The Rose & The Ring is being presented; this is nearer the adult conception of a musical than a patronizing pantomime for children and would give any child an excellent teach-in for tackling the conventions of Hello Dolly! or Twang!! There are signs that the enterprising Hampstead Theatre Club is having doubts about what children really want. They are presenting Nicholas Stuart Gray's classic treatment of Beauty & the Beast, but are hanging the foyer with sheets of paper and supplying chalks for the young audience to write up their own views on the production. We may all learn something.

But quite the most decisive

Opposite page: David Walker's designs for the ugly sisters in the ballroom scene of the ballet Cinderella at Covent Garden. "I've designed for the characters," he says, "as straight as I could. Sir Frederick Ashton plays the sweet put-upon sister, Robert Helpmann is more up to date and pushy—obviously takes after an unpleasant mother. Over-deliberation isn't funny. I want people to think: 'That's just as I always imagined Cinderella would be'." The scenery has been designed by Henry Bardon. "I like working with him," David Walker says, "we talk a lot, swap ideas and criticize each other."

move is being made by the English Stage Company at the Royal Court with 15 performances of Clowning. This is not a play or anything to do with the circus, but a public extension of exercises that director Keith Johnstone has been carrying out with actors.

Four clowns are used (they wear casual clothes, not silks) and the show begins with a demonstration of the simplest exercises—say the mime of picking something up. The exercises get more complex and are linked into short stories and sketches. The clowns speak and use all kinds of props. If this sounds technical and dull, the effect on an audience is quite the reverse: "Something beautiful and free emerges," says Johnstone, "and children find it extremely entertaining."

The clown work Johnstone is most interested in he calls The Abyss: "It is like Goofy walking over a precipice. He keeps on walking in the air, but as soon as he looks down he falls. The clown must never think about what he is going to do next, but concentrate on the job in hand. As soon as he tries to organize events, the idea collapses." Johnstone organizes the clowns to an extent by telling them what they are (say Master and Servant) and letting the actors take over from there. "I'm trying to work out some way of not being on the stage. I'm not an actor, and my presence up there is inhibiting."

Johnstone is surprised that the Lord Chamberlain has given permission for Clowning to be staged in public. Ad lib shows are disallowed in this country. "I think it is possibly because it is an entertainment for children that he's allowed it. In any case obscenity or anything he wouldn't like won't crop up. I hope we shall get children up on the stage, and I don't mind people in the audience making suggestions. With an adult audience one might run into difficulties—someone might shout: 'You're in a public lavatory'."

Through his demonstrations in schools, Johnstone is convinced that this work has a tremendous appeal for children ("they improvise gags that professional comedians would pay good money for"). As an introduction to the theatre proper he feels Clowning has value: "I think people should go to the theatre to enjoy themselves. I'm fed up with people who don't like a play working themselves up into angry defensive positions determined to be right. If you don't like it, you don't—and that's that. Clowning would certainly instil the idea into a child's mind that the theatre is for enjoyment."

These films will be showing on general release in London over the Christmas fortnight. Most carry U certificates and are suitable for family viewing

Sands of the Kalahari. Director Cy Endfield and actor Stanley Baker, who formed their own joint production company for "Zulu," have taken South West Africa as their location again. The screenplay is by Endfield and described as "an elemental story of civilized man cast into a primitive and hostile environment". In other words, six survivors of a 'plane crash rough it in the Namib desert. The main conflict centres round the triangle of Stanley Baker, Stuart Whitman and Susannah York. Above: Whitman, finally and irrevocably brutalized, fights it out with the king of the baboons. ABC release in North London 2 Jan; South London 9 Jan

The Early Bird. Despite its space age title, Robert Asher's comedy concerns the down-to-earth misadventures of a calamity-prone milkman played by Norman Wisdom as the perennial character of the pint-sized Norman Pitkin. This is Wisdom's 11th Pinewood comedy and his first in colour: critical acclaim in this country may be limited but in Latin America the series still breaks box-office records! The ubiquitous Edward Chapman is again Norman's boss, Mr Grimsdale - this time a dairy owner. Above: Wisdom hiding the bridle that announces the unofficial return of Nellie the Horse, in more than one sense the film's real hero. Rank release North London 26 Dec; South London 2 Jan

The Heroes of Telemark. Telemark is remembered chiefly as the birthplace of skiing and of Henrik Ibsen, but director Anthony Mann is solely concerned with the raid on Germany's heavy water factory by nine Norwegian commando saboteurs after an abortive preliminary attempt by British gliders. Kirk Douglas and Richard Harris spent a good proportion of the shooting schedule publicising their personal antagonism, but the exercise has instilled, in Douglas at least, an appropriate sense of history. Addressing students at Oslo University he said: "I shudder to think of a world today if the Nazis had had the atomic bomb before any - and I underline any - other country" (adding, "In my humble opinion 'The Heroes of Telemark' is one of the most important stories of the last war"). Above: Douglas and Harris in the ante-room of the Norsk Hydro factory: third member of the party is Alan Howard. Rank release North London 2 Jan; South London 9 Jan

Harem Holiday. Elvis Presley's film career has revolved around schizophrenic type-casting as either an orphaned do-gooder from Tennessee or a road-house singer warily approaching stardom. This offers him the twin benefits of surviving parents and a sizeable fan following as a top American movie star. His latest athletic adventure, directed by ex-dancer Gene Nelson, is set in the imaginary kingdom of Lunarkand where the Middle Eastern premiere of his new film is being held. The Arab villains, wanting to seize control of the country so they can sell the oil rights to America, kidnap Presley, who engineers his escape by means of karate and an outsize Valentino complex. An album of new songs for the fans and co-stars Mary Ann Mobley and Fran Jeffries. Right: Presley in mufti. ABC release in North London from 26 Dec; South London from 2 Jan

Once a Thief. Ralph Nelson's film illustrates the old axiom of "always a thief" in an ironical thriller set in modern San Francisco. In his first Hollywood film French actor Alain Delon plays a rehabilitated criminal forced back into crime by the persecution of an embittered police Inspector (Van Heflin) and the persuasion of his underworld brother (Jack Palance). Ann-Margret provides the love of a good woman which, in this case, proves insufficiently potent to divert her husband from disaster ("A" certificate: some violence that may disturb sensitive children). Above: Delon escorts Ann-Margret furiously from the night club where she has been trying to earn a few honest bucks. ABC release in South London (with "The Secret of My Success", a comedy with Stella Stevens and James Booth) from 26 Dec

Peter Pan. Walt Disney's contribution to the Christmas market is the re-issue of the full-length feature cartoon, made in 1952. Breaking with the theatrical tradition begun with the 1904 stage premiere of J M Barrie's play in which Nina Boucicault took the lead, Disney's conception of the character is as an impish, invincible boy. Barrie himself was an indefatigable experimenter in stage illusion and new animation techniques enabled Disney to create characters in harmony with the charm of the original. Never-Never Land has always been their joint territory. Above: Captain Hook receiving his morning shave at the hands of the bumbling pirate Smee. In the same programme is Disney's "Emil and the Detectives", the fourth film version of Erich Kästner's best-selling children's novel (one Japanese and two German films anticipated Disney). With Walter Slezak as "The Baron." Rank release in South London 27 Dec

West Ham United v Aston Villa, Upton Park, 3 p.m. (District Line to Upton Park then short walk)

Second Division: Leyton Orient v Middlesbrough, Brisbane Road, 3 p.m. (Central Line to Leyton)

Third Division: Brentford v Southend United, Griffin Park, 3 p.m. (Piccadilly Line to South Ealing)

Millwall v Hull City, The Den, 3 p.m. (Metropolitan Line to New Cross Gate). Despite the Division, this could be London's best match over Christmas

Sat 1 January
First Division: Fulham v Arsenal, Craven Cottage, 3 p.m. (District Line to Putney Bridge then short walk. Buses 11 14, then short walk). London "Derby" game should make Craven Cottage fuller than it has been for some time

Tottenham Hotspur v Everton, White Hart Lane, 3 p.m. (Frequent train service from Liverpool Street Station to White Hart Lane, then short walk to ground). Anguished Spurs fan wrote in after our remark about fading Spurs. The Christmas results will be the testing time and Everton never give in easily

West Ham v Nottingham Forest, Upton Park, 3 p.m. (District Line to Upton Park then short walk)

Third Division: Millwall v Southend United, The Den, 3 p.m. (Metropolitan Line to New Cross Gate). Crucial period for Millwall's championship hopes

Queen's Park Rangers v

York City, Loftus Road, 3 p.m. (Metropolitan Line to Shepherd's Bush. Central Line to White City then short walk)

RUGBY UNION

Mon 27 Dec
Harlequins v Richmond, Twickenham, 2.30 p.m. (District Line to Richmond then bus 73. Train, Waterloo to Twickenham). London rivals clash in traditional fixture

London Irish v Old Millhills, The Avenue, Sunbury-on-Thames, 2.30 p.m. (Frequent trains from Waterloo to Sunbury). Neighbours clash and at least London Irish should win this one

Rosslyn Park v Wasps, Priory Lane, Roehampton, 2.30 p.m. (District or Piccadilly Line to Hammersmith then bus 72 73)

Sat 1 Jan
England v The Rest, Twickenham, 2.15 p.m. (District Line to Richmond then bus 73. Train Waterloo to Twickenham). Best match of the Christmas season. But will rob London of many of their club matches for the day.

London Scottish v Gloucester, Richmond Athletic Ground 2.30 p.m. (Trains Waterloo to Richmond or District Line to Richmond). For those Scots not casting an eye over the enemy at Twickenham, London Scottish should provide yet another win

MOTOR SPORT

Mon 27 Dec. Brands Hatch, 12.30 p.m., BRSCC Meeting. Peter Gethin, son of racehorse trainer and ex-jockey Ken Gethin, drives Piper Alfa Romeo on first outing. It is

Fri 24 December
Too Many Christmas Trees. The Avengers Christmas edition follows the line of fantasy in English traditional settings. This time the setting is a Dickensian House Party, given by a mad publisher. There is a horrific Santa, a fight in the Hall of Mirrors, a forest of Christmas trees and a corpse in the Great Expectations Room. Diana Rigg is dressed as Oliver Twist and Patrick Macnee as Sydney Carton. ITV, 8 p.m. (London area)

Sat 25 December
When Comedy Was King—a compilation film explores the era of the silent screen—of Chaplin, Keaton and Laurel & Hardy. It is divided into 7 parts, written and produced by Robert Youngson. BBC-2, 6.30 p.m.

Mother Goose Pantomime—Terry Scott is Mother Goose, Norman Vaughan is her son, Jon Pertwee is the Village Squire, Joanna Rigby and

Anne Dawson provide the glamour as Prince Colin and the squire's daughter, Jill. BBC-1, 4.50 p.m.

Max Bygraves meets the Black & White Minstrels—Max Bygraves joins the Minstrels for the start of a new series. Besides his own special spot, Bygraves joins in the Minstrels' vocal numbers and provides links between scenes. Regulars in the series include Dai Francis, Tony Mercer, John Boulter and the TV Toppers. Dance director is Roy Gunsen and producer is George Inns. BBC-1, 7.0 p.m.

The Ken Dodd Christmas Show. Ken Dodd is head of Knotty Ash Television, wishes everyone a Doddy Christmas, introduces a 60-minute show with Sandie Shaw, ventriloquist Neville King and other guest artists. BBC-1, 9.30 p.m.

Sun 26 December
The Reputation Makers—a series examining the people who make and break reputations, this week in films, featuring Donald Zec. He is confronted with his criticisms of Samantha Eggar, Brian Epstein, Diana Dors, who appear in person. Angus Wilson is chairman. A clip from the Beatles recent TV programme performing part of their new song, Day Tripper. ITV, 2.5 p.m.

Oliver Twist. The David Lean film. Alec Guinness as Fagin, Robert Newton as Bill Sykes and John Howard Davies as Oliver. Classic Dickensian film, made in 1948. Diana Dors plays the Undertaker's daughter. BBC-1, 7.25 p.m.

The Golden Ring. How they made Gottterdammerung in Vienna. Backroom-boys assembling a complex recording studio in a Viennese ballroom; eavesdropping on conductor Georg Solti and group of soloists, and Wagner's music, the Immolation Scene, and Siegfried's Funeral March. BBC-1, 10.10 p.m.

Peter and the Wolf. A new approach to Prokofiev's musical tale for children. The English Chamber Orchestra is conducted by Dudley Simpson and Nicholas Chagrin narrates the tale. BBC-1, 4.45 p.m.

Mon 27 December
Patience. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company transmitted from the Saville Theatre (the first time on television). Gilbert's arrows are aimed at Oscar Wilde and the cult of aestheticism. BBC-2, 7.30 p.m.

Play: Yob and Nabob. Emlyn Williams and Bill Fraser in a suspense thriller about a rich man who gives a poor man a lift in his Rolls, and who becomes dominated by the poor man in the course of the journey down M1. Produced by George Spenton Foster, written by Derrick Sherwin. BBC-2, 10.5 p.m.

Mon 3 January
The White Stocking. The first of a series of dramatic versions of stories by D H Lawrence, about two men in love with a girl. Lawrence wrote the story in 1907 while he was a student at Nottingham University. With Brian Smith, Celestine Randall, David Langton, Bobbie Oswald. ITV 9.40 p.m.

Restaurants

Selective restaurant guide especially compiled by Neil Rhind, Editorial Manager of the Good Food Club. The Club's Good Food Guide (published by Consumers' Association and Cassell) has 1,600 entries covering the whole country

Some basically British restaurants for lunching, and some wine bars for lunchtime and evening drinks. C.S. = Closed Sundays. Lunch approximately noon to 3 p.m., except where otherwise stated.

W 1

BAKER & OVEN, 10 Paddington St, W 1 (HOP 1577). Hours, 12-3; 6-11. There was a bake-oven here, so the name isn't as whimsical as it may at first seem. It is a pleasant, quite new cellar-restaurant with two beer and wine bars on the ground floor. In the basement one dines in alcoves under the road. Onion soup with croûtons and fresh parsley is very good value at 2s; the veal, ham and egg pie with fresh vegetables remarkable value at 5s 6d. Steak & kidney pie much commended. In the wine bar you can get a glass of Chambolle Musigny for 2s 9d, and the rolls are hot. Draught beers

BENTLEY'S, 11 Swallow St, off Piccadilly, W 1 (REG 6210). W A, D J and R G Bentley. Dinner 5.30-11. C.S. If you are partial to oysters, Bentley's, who have their own oyster beds, is a good place to indulge your fancy. They also have an Oyster Bar where they will sell oysters to you from 12s to 17s 6d the half-dozen. In the bar and the upstairs restaurant there are other sorts of fish and shellfish from about 10s 6d to 25s. The lobster bisque (5s) is very good. Wines from about 20s; some by the glass including Black Velvet. Draught Guinness, of course

CONNAUGHT HOTEL, Carlos Pl, W 1 (GRO 7070). Grill Room 5.30-11.30. Closed Sat night and at 2 p.m. on Sun. Restaurant 6.30-11; 6.30-10 on Sun. The restaurant in this large hotel has been described as a "thoroughly civilized place to dine." It's thoroughly civilized at lunchtime as well. The menu is well balanced, the service impressive, the wine list long and interesting, and nearly all the bottles cost more than 20s. A daily luncheon dish is usually British but it is for the specialities (which have to be ordered in advance) that the Connaught is really famous; cassolette de quenelles médaillons de veau Lucullus, suprême de volaille Carlos. The tables d'hôte are from 30s, and main dishes a la carte from 15s 6d upwards. If you are feeling mean, there are carafe wines from 16s 6d

FORTNUM & MASON, 181-4 Piccadilly, W 1 (REG 8040). Meals served in restaurant or soda fountain from 12-11.30 p.m. (to 12.30 a.m. Sundays in soda fountain). C.S. As well as having one of the most famous and interesting food shops in the country, Fortnum's also has a most reliable restaurant and a genuine soda fountain. The former, on the fourth floor, has an international menu with main dishes in the 10s 6d to 15s range; while the latter caters primarily for lighter meals. Sandwiches open and closed. The small snacks include a perfect example of Fortnum's sophistication—a baked potato stuffed with Serugian caviar—and sweet and savoury pies baked in their own bakeries. The ice creams and fruit drinks are very good. Licensed; wines by the carafe and glass in both departments. There is an entrance to the Fountain in Jermyn St

LYON'S CARVERIES; CUMBERLAND HOTEL, Marble Arch, W 1 (AMB 1234). C.S. REGENT PALACE HOTEL, Piccadilly, W 1 (REG 7000). C.S. STRAND CORNER

HOUSE, Charing X, WC 2 (WHI 7373). Here is the opportunity not only to eat as much as you can for 18s or so, but also a chance to have a go at carving the joints yourself. There is a short list of starters: soup, grapefruit, melon and such, brought by the waitress. After this you have free run of half a dozen hot and cold joints from which you can hack as much as you like, as often as you like. The vegetables are not up to the standard of the meats. Sound wine in bottle and carafe. Check times of lunch and dinner before setting out—the three places are by no means similar in this respect

SCOTT'S, 18-20 Coventry St, W 1 (GER 7175). Manager: Mr E W Jordan. Dinner 6-11. Some people think Scott's is an anachronism with its gilt, mirrors and coat-hooks. Whatever anachronisms there may be they aren't the prices on the menu and wine list. The fish dishes are best (though the meats should not be ignored); lobster bisque (7s 6d), sole a la Scotts (17s 6d) and lobster Thermidor (30s). Lime sorbet (3s 6d) and the crêpes suzette (9s 6d) are good for afterwards. Wines from 20s the bottle

SHIRREFF'S RESTAURANT & WINE PARLOUR, 15 Great Castle St, Oxford Circus, W 1 (LAN 2125 & 1507). Bruce E Todd. Dinner 5.30-8.30 (Sat lunch only 12-2). C.S. You will get a reliable if unexciting meal at the wine parlour of dishes like green pea soup (1s 3d), paprika chicken and rice (8s) and caramel cream. But the wine list is outstanding and costs little more than shop prices. Sherries from 1s 6d a glass, 15 named wines by the glass 1s 6d to 3s 9d. The choice of Burgundies, clarets and hocks should please the most fastidious and cultivated of oenophiles

CITY BARGE, Strand-on-the-Green, Chiswick, W 4 (CHI 2148 & 8649). Manager E Townsend. Lunch only. 12.20-2.30. Closed Sat & Sun. You can sit outside the City Barge, on the towpath, and watch the river go by as you drink. Inside, at lunchtime, the dining room offers a short menu of freshly-cooked reasonably priced food: the mussels in butter, served with lettuce and brown bread (5s 6d) is a good thing to have before a steak (9s 6d), or more interestingly, the calves kidneys curried in white wine with rice (9s 6d). Licensed: choice of 10 wines by the glass from 2s 3d

W 14

THE GUN ROOM, 3 Russell Gdns, W 14 (BAY 2087). Manager Kevin Daly. Dinner 7-11.30. C.S. As its name suggests the decor here has a military theme; the tables are set between high wooden partitions and the place is lit by old street lamps. From a food point of view the flavours are more traditional: steak & kidney & mushroom pie (9s 6d), chicken casserole in wine (10s 6d) and Dublin Bay prawns (deep fried, 6s 6d); the unusual afters include peppermint ice cream with a hot chocolate sauce (4s 6d). Licensed: wine in carafes 9s; by the glass 3s

CASK & FLASK, 39/41 Palace St, SW 1 (VIC 7630). R E W

Stokes. Hours, 11-3; 5.30-11. The Cask is a tiny little one-bar pub, very cosy, clean and polished, near Victoria station. On dark nights it seems to twinkle like a good deed in a naughty world. Here you can get 26 different wines by the glass; sherries from the wood 3s 3d, Bordeaux from 2s 6d, Burgundies from 2s 6d, Alsatian and Provençal wines (a dry rosé, 3s), and a couple of German wines (3s & 3s 6d). The measures are generous and the white wines chilled. Sandwiches only. Tapeworm music unfortunately, but it doesn't intrude too much. There is even champagne by the glass (5s)

EBURY WINE BAR, 139 Ebury St, SW 1 (SLO 5477). Hours, 12-3; 6-11 (12-2; 7-10.30 Sunday). The food here is mainly of the Danish open-sandwich variety, with a number of specialities like curried prawns or cottage cheese with sliced apple and dates, or cold meats and salad (from 6s 6d). In particular the smoked cod roe on pumpnickel (3s) and the 6s boeuf tartare are good. On the drinkable side of the menu there is a decent range of wines by the glass or pitcher: Beaujolais, rosé, Aligoté, hock, claret and Sauternes (from 1s 8d the glass, or 9s the pitcher)

HUNTING LODGE, Lower Regent St, SW 1 (WHI 4222). Dinner 6.30-11. C.S. This is an attempt by Forte's to create the finest possible menu of traditional English food. The whole place (older readers will remember it as the Hungaria) has been done up to look like an English tavern with staff dressed as Edwardian footmen. Needless to say the eating here, though authentic, isn't cheap: a variety of genuine potted meats (a rarity these days) cost 12s 6d each; the Cumberland ring sausage is 21s for two. Large and expensive wine list

RANELAGH, 39 Ranelagh Gve, SW 1 (SLO 2752). Dinner to 11.30. This is a very go-ahead pub with a number of restaurants, each of which does a few dishes really well. In some room or other you can have a sea-food hot pot, or a casserole du jour, or make a pig of yourself at the Oliver Twist cold food table, and none of these will cost more than 12s 6d. No first course, but filling up can be done with sweets and cheeses. Usual pub drinks; draught port and sherry, pitchers of wine from about 15s

STONE'S CHOP HOUSE, Panton St, SW 1 (WHI 0037). Dinner 6-12. C.S. This is from the same stable as Simpson's-in-the-Strand and is similarly a traditional English restaurant, though it has less atmosphere because the building was put up only in 1963. Roasts (beef 13s 6d, mutton 12s 6d) from the trolley, steak and kidney pudding (9s 6d) and various grills (12s 6d-16s 6d), can provide a not too expensive lunch. Wine list better than Simpson's; carafes from 13s 6d, by the glass 3s to 7s 6d (Ch. Yquem); Bass on draught

CHELSEA POTTER, 119 King's Rd, SW 3 (FLA 5503). Hours, 11-3; 5.30-11. In this long, horseshoe-shaped bar connoisseurs of tequila, ouzo, Polish plum brandy, Chinese wines, Old Bushmills whisky or almost any other wine, spirit or liqueur you care to name should be happy, for the generous range of drinks by the glass is claimed to be one of the largest in London. If you want a glass of a more ordinary wine you might have to take a quarter bottle instead and suffer it being plunged into the warm washing-up water to bring it to room temperature. There are grills with chips and things, and a range of French cheeses and bread. The Chelsea Potter must be one of the few pubs in London that stocks a good range of French cigarettes FIDDLERS THREE, 15 Beauchamp Pl, SW 3 (KEN 4252). Dinner 6.30-10.30. C.S. This restaurant is proof that one can eat in London very modestly, yet have decent food that is properly cooked. Because the prices are so low the decor has to be kept functional: whitewashed walls, scrubbed tables and a blackboard menu. Cuisine basically British: duck soup, stuffed marrow, Norfolk stew with dumplings, baked wood pigeon, and the various fruit pies are tip-top value. Main dishes about 5s to 7s 6d including vegetables. Take your own drinks. A good family place

MASSEY'S CHOP HOUSE, 38 Beauchamp Place, SW 3 (KEN 4856 & KNI 4270). C.S. Mr G Defris. Dinner 6.30-11. A small steak house offering steaks, chops and chickens cooked on a charcoal grill. The home made pâté, chump chop (12s), fillet steak (16s 6d) and T-bone (30s for 2) are reliable eating. Service friendly and attentive. Small wine list; by the glass 4s

OUZEL GALLERY, 6 Hollywood Rd, SW 10 (FLA 3500). Robert Colville. Dinner only, 7-midnight. C.S. This is a nice sort of amateur place that does very professional cooking. Lithographs of old ships and green baize walls can't be eaten of course, but they make a pleasant setting for sorrel soup (4s 6d), venison with red-currant jelly and chestnut purée (11s 6d) and lemon sorbet (3s 6d). Chicken Kiev, jugged hare and fresh fruit salad for less adventurous eaters. Licensed

HUNGRY HORSE, 196 Fulham Rd, SW 10 (FLA 7757). Bill Staughton. Dinner only, 6.30-midnight. Another example of the back-to-Mrs-Beeton school—basically British from starters to finish; gulls' eggs or leeks to begin with; brains in black butter, roast beef and Yorkshire, or salmon fishcakes as a main dish; baked treacle tart or Dorothy's Glorious Pudding to end. All very filling, and about 25s each without drinks. Licensed

WC 1

BROWN BEAR, 179 High Holborn, WC 1 (TEM 4646). Mr H Roberts. Dinner (grills only W-F) 6.30-9. This Trust House on the corner of Drury Lane has a dining area that is small, with only a handful of tables and a few bar stools. Roasts and grills predominate on the menu: plaice and chips (7s 6d), roast pork, loin of lamb, cold salmon, mixed grill (12s 6d) and the like. The soups and cheeses are good; the helpings plentiful. Wines from 8s 6d, by the glass 2s 6d; beers on draught

WC 2

GORDON'S WINE CELLARS, 47 Villiers St, WC 2. Hours, 11.30-2.30; 5.30-

This is a Free Vintners house; which means the proprietors are a law unto themselves and they need not conform with usual licensing practice. In fact they do the opposite and close earlier than London's pubs. The drink is mainly sherry; varieties from the very driest to the most syrupy sweet. Various French wines by the glass and a 2s 2d hock which is very good value and extremely refreshing. Sandwiches at lunchtime and a free supply of dry water biscuits. They have a cellar bar which can be entered by a mysterious door off the Watergate Walk, which makes it a suitable place to impress impressionable young girls or take someone else's wife (or husband). It gets very crowded and the seating room is limited. No beers or spirits

HENEKEY'S, 354 Strand, WC 2 (TEM 7153). Henekey's Ltd. Hours, 11-3; 5.30-11. There are three bars here; two on the ground floor which seem very much like the usual pub bars but have the added attraction of port and sherry served from enormous wooden barrels, and an upstairs room where the interest is in the 38 wines by the glass (from 1s 7d for an Australian red to 5s 4d for a large glass of crusted port). They also do 24 spirits by the glass and 18 liqueurs should you want them. If this extraordinary range doesn't quite meet your requirements there is a long retail list of wine which can be had by the bottle or half-bottle and are very reasonably priced. It is a splendid place for wine sampling for they offer a modest list of cheeses and sandwiches to help you keep sober. It is most pleasant to take a brand and black coffee after you lunch here

NAG'S HEAD, 10 James St, WC 2 (TEM 4678). Mr M Cox. Dinner 5.30-11. C.S. This famous pub, with its theatrical decor, near Covent Garden starts dinner early enough for you to dine before the opera. If you tell them what time the curtain goes up they will try to feed you in time. The food is plain: sole, trout, duck, chicken and grills from about 6s to 15s. Beer on tap; wine by the glass 3s. Not an outstanding place, but very useful

RULES, 35 Maiden Lane, WC 2 (TEM 5314). Dinner, 6-11.30. Rule's is a survival from the past. Not in the prices, I hasten to add, but in its appearance. Plush banquettes, Spy print, and the general air of Victorian richness about the place all help to make one's meals the little bit more enjoyable. The do British food very well indeed: whitebait, smoked eel, jugged hare with redcurrant jelly (an enormous helping, 11s 6d) and braised steak with beer and onions. Wines rather dear, but there are some by the glass at 3s. Rule's have extended into the shop next door, but it is the ground floor room at No 35 which should be booked if you are accompanied by tourists

SHEEKEY'S, 29-31 St Martin's Ct, WC 2 (TEM 4118). J Sheekey Ltd. Meals served 12.15-8.30 (Sat 12.15-3). C.S. A fish restaurant off the southern end of Charing X Road. It is very crowded, for the tables are set rather too close together and you might have to share yours with others. Still, the fish is worth it. Good helpings of stewed eels (6s), dressed crab (8s), lobster soup (6s). The rest of the seafood is steamed; sole (12s 6d), turbot (11s 6d), salmon (16s) and others, served with either lobster (1s 6d) or parsley (1s) sauce. No sweets, only cheese. Good white wines from 18s 6d and upwards; by the glass 4s

SHORT'S BAR, 142 Strand, WC 2. (TEM 0156). Hours, 11-3, 5.30-11. Short's Ltd. Short's claims to be the oldest wine house in London for they were founded in 1672. This particular branch has a downstairs restaurant and cocktail bar. On the ground floor is a lounge and buffet bar selling a range of wines and spirits by the glass, with a small counter for sandwiches or more substantial cold meat salads (roast beef 8s 6d to salmon 10s 6d). Besides their own whisky (from 2s 6d), gin and sherry (two sorts, at 2s 6d and 3s 9d) you can take any of 7 wines by the glass: from rosé (3s 3d, 1s 11d a sample glass) to Berncasteler Riesling (4s 10d and 2s 10d)

SIMPSON'S-IN-THE-STRAND, 100 The Strand, WC 2 (TEM 7131). Lunch 12-3; dinner 6-10. C.S. Simpson's is not for slimmers. The inclusive helpings of body-building potatoes and cabbage with every main course preclude such pastimes. The trolley-borne roasts, the pies, puddings (sweet as well as savoury) and the restaurant's basic Britishness have made Simpson's world famous. You will be able to stuff yourself for quite a modest sum. Don't forget to tip the carver. The wine list is good and expensive; the Bass on draught well kept; carafes from 13s 6d

N 14

OLD CHERRY TREE, The Green, Southgate, N 14 (PAL 0343). Nicholson's Catering (London) Ltd. Dinner 7-10. C.S. A consciously Olde Worlde pub, highly suitable for showing to visiting foreigners. The restaurant is called the Forge, and the food matches the decor: roast beef on a trolley, steak & kidney pie, and oxtail, all correctly cooked and properly served, though not very cheap. The blackberry & apple pie is a commendable sweet. Licensed: about 60 wines, starting around 17s

NW 3

TURPIN'S, 118 Heath St, NW 3 (HAM 3791). Lunch, Sunday only, 12-3. Dinner, Tue-Sat only, 6.30-11.30. This is a new English restaurant which is not only much more enterprising than most places but rigidly refuses to serve tinned or frozen vegetables—only fresh ones, in season, are offered. The chestnut or iced cream of cucumber soup (4s 6d & 3s 6d), the steak & kidney pudding or grilled trout (8s 6d) should be investigated. Unlicensed; wines fetched

EC 2

MAGPIE & PUNCHBOWL GRILL, 86 Bishopsgate, EC 2 (LON 4310). Finch's. Lunch only 12.15-2.30. Closed Sat & Sun. Most City pubs are extolled for no more reason than that they can grill a steak without actually burning it and serve a meat pie that isn't totally inedible. The Magpie is not only one of the few with a good standard of cooking if you want the usual steaks, soles, scampi and such-like, but offers a quite spectacular hors d'oeuvre riche for 22s 6d. This is a plateful of pâté maison, cold meats, smoked salmon, prawns, asparagus, salami and all sorts of other things. Very good and filling. Four sorts of draught beer if you have room. Wines from about 14s

GEORGE AND VULTURE, 3 Castle Ct, Cornhill, EC 3 (HOP 8000 Ext 351). John Gardner (London) Ltd. Lunch only 12-3. Closed Sat and Sun. So many pubs in the City serve such beastly food that it makes a change to recommend one that doesn't. The speciality here, on Thursday during the oyster season (now, in fact), is Pickwick Pudding, made with steak, kidney, oysters and a special seasoning. This is 10s 6d; other popular dishes are cheaper—steak (9s), chump chops (7s), mixed grill (7s 6d), and gammon rashers (8s 6d). Cheeses (the Stilton is good) and steamed puddings for afters. Rosé in carafe (9s 6d), quarter-bottles and named wines by the glass from 4s; Ind Coope on draught. The George gets very busy by 12.45, and bookings are taken only before 12.30 p m

SWEETING'S, 39 Queen Victoria St, EC 4 (CIT 3062). Lunch only 11.30-3. Closed Sat & Sun. Sweeting's is now more than 100 years old, and the manager claims that his staff have been there almost as long. It is, of course, one of the best places in the City for sea food: smoked cod roe (4s), soured herring (6s), real turtle soup (4s 6d), fish pie (9s 6d), grilled herrings in mustard sauce (6s 6d), fresh salmon fishcakes (9s 6d). There are a few meaty things if you don't want fish. White wines on a help-yourself basis at 3s 6d the glass; champagne (7s 6d), Black Velvet (8s 6d). Bookings taken only for before 1 p m, or after 1.30 p m

EL VINO, 47 Fleet St, EC 4 (FLE 6786). Bowyer & Co. Hours, 11-3; 5.30-11. This is a very old-fashioned place, rather dusty but just right for journalists and lawyers to meet, and talk, and drink. Behind the long bar on the ground floor there are large barrels of port and sherry and a perfectly adequate range of wines and spirits by the glass. One can even get a glass of Vosne Romanée (6s for nigh on a quarter of a bottle) and very good drinking it is. Like most London wine bars El VINO's bottle a lot of their own wines and these can be bought to take away. Sandwiches only, even at lunchtime. Service knowledgeable and pleasant

ANCHOR TAVERN, 1 Bankside, SE 1 (GRE 2437). Hours, 12-3; 6-11. This old pub overlooks the river, and because of its antiquity and appearance it is much frequented by tourists. In a restaurant on the ground floor there is plain cooking and a smallish menu of grills and such: mixed grill (11s 6d) or pork chops (9s 6d) for example. Main dishes include potatoes and a garnish. On Tuesdays there is a most delicious Queen's Pudding. Usual pub drinks with a short, not-excessively-priced wine list. You must wait in the downstairs bar while your table is prepared until you are called

WRITERS ON RESTAURANTS

East and West by John Mortimer

Mr. Ling, proprietor of the East and West, has seen Chinatown disappear during his 27 years in London

Choosing a favourite restaurant means starting with a process of elimination, ruling out all those places where business, love, politeness or a search for a new setting for endlessly repeated First Acts, have uncomfortably lured you. Among the many things which make restaurants impossible, I instantly bar establishments which:

1. Serve frozen vegetables.
2. Are called Bistros and staffed entirely by young men dressed by His Clothes, who either giggle inaccessibly in corners or will join you at the table at the drop of a carafe.
3. Contain American Agents in blue mohair suits who flash smiles and shout fraternal greetings.
4. Impose any mode of dress on their clientele. A restaurant is a place where any person, not drunk or suffering from an infectious disease, is entitled to buy food. To require him to wear a tie and jacket, or her to abstain from a trouser suit, is snobbish, vulgar and impertinent.
5. All eating places in any way disguised as bits of Ancient Rome, the Battle of Waterloo, London in the Gay Nineties, or 18th-century France. As soon as you see a waiter in a brown bowler hat suspect the cooking.
6. Show any hesitation about accepting cheques. (Legally you can always leave a cheque, or sign the bill, and walk away; but a bitter legal argument is bad for the digestion and may leave your companion trembling and in tears.)

These firm rules still leave a few honourable and friendly eating places, always watched by their proprietors with loving care, where the staff have not yet abandoned the vegetable knife and the cooking is worth the money. But I find I more often make the journey down the West India Dock Road at night, where parking is no problem, to Jimmy Ling's East and West Restaurant.*

The expedition is a kind of ceremony. You should telephone and ask Mr Ling for the best dinner he can think of. His most extravagant meal might cost you almost a pound each, or far less than the price of one dish in the Mayfair Boeuf en Croûte belt. You can then drive peacefully past St Paul's and the sleeping Bank, past the Angel and down towards the docks, with no fear of that agonizing 10 minutes when you face a girl with a long menu and no ideas. At the East and West you can start on the story of your life the moment you sit down.

Once you've got to West India Dock Road you have a drink at Charlie Brown's and then cross the road to buy cold Yugoslav Reising. For reasons obscurely connected with the fire escape Jimmy Ling has no licence, so you take your wine upstairs in the East and West. Downstairs there is a large juke box, café tables, teenagers, girls with some of the most elaborate hairdos in the East End, tramps and layabouts, seamen and garment manufacturers on the way home, eating curry and chicken chow, deafened by the Honeycombs. Upstairs Mr Ling says is for the posh; quiet, orange paint, Chinese Virgins and dragons in glass cases.

Among the posh Mr Ling has entertained the Crazy Gang, Frank Sinatra and a lady whose name, as he says it, sounds totally Chinese: but whom I have now identified as Janette Scott.

And the food? Sweet corn and crab meat soup. A duck neatly boned, sewn up and cooked crisply in its skin. Fresh bream, glazed with sweet and sour sauce. A mixture of pork, prawns and water chestnuts cooked in short pastry. Glistening spare ribs. Chicken wings stuffed with bean shoots and chestnuts. And you end with pale tea and the clean taste of lichees.

The East and West's kitchens are clean, old-fashioned, and aromatic. The cooks, led by Mr Wang, are slicing chickens thin and pale as matchsticks, brewing sweet and sour, consulting Chinese recipes hung over the cooker. Jimmy Ling has been there 27 years, and has seen Chinatown disappear, and opium vanish from Limehouse and Pennyfields. But the romantic can still sniff danger in Charlie Brown's or recognize Holmes, mumbling chow by the juke box downstairs. The practical can enjoy some of the best, and certainly the cheapest, food in London.

*East and West Chinese Restaurant, 92 West India Dock Rd (EAS 3418). Dinner-lunch 11-2, other meals all day 11 to midnight. Open Sunday 12 noon to midnight

THE BALLET MONT PARNASSE (left) and BRYAN BLACKBURN (below), Quaglinos & The Allegro, Bury Street, St James's SW 1 (WHI 6767). There will be some kicks for the old year and for the new at Quags when the six pretty members of the Ballet Montparnasse celebrate the turn with an uproarious can-can. If these excitements are too much, there will be time to relax and listen to the sophisticated comedy material of Bryan Blackburn. He began life as an actor in Leicester, but discovered a talent for writing and performing his own comedy material

RAY MARTINE (below left), Whisky-a-Go-Go, 33 Wardour Street, W 1 (GER 4224). Back in town for two evenings, Christmas Eve and Christmas Day, the busy Mr Martine returns to the club where he used to double a few years ago with his more celebrated performances at the Deuragon in Hackney. His West End cabaret debut got off to a shaky start at the Establishment, but set-backs inspire him to greater things and he has become a television favourite and has just finished his first straight role—as a taxi driver in The Avengers. Still lives in the Old Kent Road, still likes to be heckled

Note this. This is the colour of the world's best whisky.

Why is J&B Rare?

Whisky is a serious subject. J&B is a serious whisky. It owes its rare lightness and smoothness to the expensive Highland malts chosen for the blend. J&B even looks different—paler, smoother, kinder in your glass. Nor is J&B all lightness without body. Although first contact is amazingly light and gentle, the rare character of this whisky soon builds up, full and sturdy.

As you might expect, a rare whisky such as this costs a little more.

Make your little presents something special this year.
